WICKERSHAM REPORT GOES TO WHITE HOUSE

Conservatives, Liberals Jockeying For Position

VOLUMINOUS FINDINGS BY THE COMMISSION

FRICION STILL BETWEEN FACTIONS IN LEGISLATURE

POSSIBILITY OF AN OPEN BREAK BETWEEN HOUSE, SENATE AND GOVERNOR

CONCILIATORY MEASURES ARE OFFERED AS PALLIATIVE AT PRESENT

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — Jockeying for position by conservative and liberal legislative factions opened today as both houses began the task of preparing the session bills.

With the possibility of an open break between the conservative majorities of the house and senate and Governor Floyd B. Olson, farmer-labor, conciliatory measures were being favored.

Modifications of both conservative and liberal programs was believed responsible since both sides sought to avoid responsibility for a deadlock.

In the senate which was to meet tonight a few matters of organization remained to be acted upon. An anti-nepotism resolution sponsored by Senators Sherman Child, Minneapolis, and W. B. Richardson, Rochester, was to be reported without recommendation by the rules committee.

Party lines were not expected to be followed in the debate which is holding up appointment of about 40 senate employees. The resolution was introduced by two conservative members, but is expected to receive its main support from the farmer-labor clique. A similar measure was defeated in the house by conservatives.

A compromise of Governor Olson's demand for non-confirmation was expected to be reached. A conference of Olson and the conservative rule committee was to be held today or tomorrow. Most of the list was expected to be confirmed with the exception of certain committee posts where the governor will require representation to carry out his program.

Bills to carry out the governor's program will be introduced in the house this week, Representative Frank Starkey, St. Paul, announced.

A possible split over the governor's conservation program was believed averted when Olson announced he would sign any conservation bill to which forestry and conservation experts agreed.

A point of friction on the program had developed when the house re-education committee submitted a bill calling for a conservation commissioner appointed by the governor and a commissioner named by the commission.

Frank W. Matson, members of the Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission, met today with representatives of trucking concerns to draw up legislation to give the commission more complete control over truck operations in the state.

The new senate rules drafted by the rules committee leave Lieutenant Governor Henry Arens practically without power. A new rule makes it mandatory upon him to call the president prom. A. S. Larson, Sandstone, conservative, to the chair when the lieutenant-governor leaves. Previously he had been allowed to name any senator.

The house appropriations committee was to meet late today and approve appropriations of $765,000 for rebuilding of structures at the Moorhead State Teachers' College, destroyed by fire last year.

Approval of the grant would be the first definite action in Governor Olson's unemployment program.

Representative R. W. Hitchcock, of Hibbing, chairman of the committee, said the appropriation would provide for issuance of state certificates of indebtedness payable over a ten year period. Hitchcock said he felt certain the Moorhead funds would be made available.

A state driver's license bill, drawn up on the recommendation of the Minnesota Automobile Association, was to be introduced in the house today by Representative John A. Weeks, Minneapolis.

The bill provides for examination of every driver before he would be allowed to operate a car on Minnesota highways.

To increase revenue to counties made up largely of idle land, eight northern Minnesota representatives today were to introduce a bill asking a five cents an acre tax on all unused land granted to the state by the federal government, and owned by the state in trust, including land set aside for state forests.

Minneapolis, Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — The city's tenth traffic death of the year was recorded today. John S. Seledic, 29, was instantly killed yesterday when he was struck by a car driven by Delord Peterson, 23, Bethel, Minn. Nine persons were injured in week end traffic accidents.

Winchester, England, Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — Two royal air force officers were killed and nine persons injured today when a royal air force bombing plane crashed into the aerodrome at Wrothdown.

DEATH ROBS A MILLING MOB OF ITS PREY

NEGRO GUNMAN DIES AT HOSPITAL BEFORE ANGERED MEN CAN GET HIM

DEATH AVERTED BATTLE BETWEEN MOB MEN AND DOZENS OF POLICE

Shreveport, La., Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — Death robbed a milling mob of its prey here Sunday night when Leman McDaniel, negro gunman believed to have slain two policemen, died as hundreds of angered men clattered down the halls of Charity Hospital to his room.

Announcement of the negro's death averted a probable battle between the mobmen and dozens of policemen stationed at strategic points throughout the hospital.

Three men leading the mob were invited into the negro's room to view the body, Dr. E. L. Sanderson, superintendent, said.

The three returned to their companions with the news, and in an hour the mob was dispersed.

Lee A. Williams, 24, and Teddy Williams, 26, youngest members of the Shreveport police force, were killed in a raid on a negro gambling den.

Garbed in overalls and their faces blackened, the two officers entered the dive Saturday night. When they commanded the gamblers to throw up their hands and line up against the wall, McDaniel opened fire, apparently mistaking them for hijackers.

The negro was wounded in the gun battle which followed.

The raid was part of a Caddo Parish campaign to halt lawlessness.

By LYLE C. WILSON
Washington, Jan. 19. — The effort of Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, to postpone decision until Feb. 9 on the proposal to appropriate $25,000,000 to the Red Cross for relief this winter, failed today on a point of order made by Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska.

Vice President Curtis supported Norris' contention that Reed's proposal was not in order. The senate must vote on the $25,000,000 project before 4 P. M.

Senator Robinson told the senate he had been advised that Chairman Arthur Woods of President Hoover's unemployment committee had asked for $100,000,000 for relief.

"I cannot say on any authority of Col. Wood," Robinson said, "nor for anyone purporting to speak for him, but I am informed he had asked four times the amount of this amendment."

Pole made these observations before the senate sub-committee headed by Senator Glass, Dem., Va., secretary of the treasury in the Wilson administration, now directing a searching inquiry into the banking and money systems of the nation.

INCARCERATION IS DUE TO NOT READING PAPERS

TWO MEN WITH LONG CRIMINAL RECORDS MAKE RUEFUL ADMISSION

BANDITS HID MONEY IN TREE, IT'S RECOVERED AND ROBBERS CAPTURED

Chicago, Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — Two men with long criminal records ruefully admitted today that their incarceration was due to not reading the newspapers.

On Saturday afternoon, three men robbed the Oak Lawn Trust & Savings Bank of Oak Lawn of $3,470. Running from the institution with their loot, they wounded Police Sgt. Fred O'Brien, who was passing.

Fred Behrend, 22, who is employed near the bank, witnessed the escape, and gave chase. Although outdistanced by the robbers, Behrend saw them place the money in a hollow willow tree. When the robbers disappeared, Behrend picked up the money and returned it to the bank.

Yesterday, two men returned to the willow. As one of them sought the money supposedly hidden there, nine policemen charged upon him. He ran to a waiting automobile and escaped with his companion, only to be captured after their machine had turned over after a long chase. At headquarters where they were identified by witnesses, they gave their names as Louis Kasper, 35, and John Bartz, 38, both of Chicago.

There they discovered that their capture was due to their not having read the Saturday night newspapers. In them were accounts of the robbery, the recovery of the cached money, and the plans of police to wait at the willow tree until the robbers returned for their loot.

LIGHT SNOW IS GENERAL OVER NORTHWEST

HEAVY BLANKET, 10 INCHES DEEP, IN SOME PLACES IN IOWA

GOLF AND TENNIS MAY NOW GIVE WAY TO TRADITIONAL WINTER SPORTS

Minneapolis, Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — Winter sports enthusiasts who started their annual sports play week without any snow or cold weather became optimistic today when the U. S. weather bureau forecast snow and colder temperatures.

Light snow was general over the northwest today and was reported heading for the Twin Cities.

The annual midwinter sports week here started yesterday with golf and tennis programs substituted for snow modelling and toboggan races at the last moment.

The city park board collected all the snow they could find from ravines and gullies and covered a ski slide so that the ski jumping events could be run off.

On the golf course where the ski slide is located golfers competed in a special midwinter tournament.

With the predictions of colder weather and snow program officials hoped they could eliminate the golf and tennis and carry on some of the more traditional winter sports.

In Iowa the state was covered by a heavy blanket of snow that reached 10 inches at some points.

Two persons were killed in the mid-west in traffic accidents blamed on the storm which extended over the Great Lakes area. In Chicago snow fell all day yesterday but melted as rapidly as it fell.

White Bear, Minn., Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — The airplane propeller of his ice boat struck and fatally injured George Gere, Jr., St. Paul, here yesterday. Gere was removing a peg from beneath the boat when the whirling propeller blade hit him on the head, fracturing his skull.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — Heavy snowfall tied up the ice boats here for the Northwestern Ice Yacht Association's regatta and caused postponement of its opening races, scheduled for today.

Skippers of speedy sailboats from Kalamazoo, Detroit, Menomonee, Oshkosh, Milwaukee, Madison and other points awaited the possibility of a thaw before the end of the week to clear the course of Lake Mendota.

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — A 79 degree temperature split developed in western Canada today.

Chesterfield inlet on the shores of Hudson Bay reported 40 below while Lethbridge, Alta., on the western prairies had 39 degrees above zero.

MINISTER'S SON IS ALABAMA'S 39TH GOVERNOR TODAY

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — B. M. Miller, Presbyterian minister's son, who four years ago laid aside robes of judge and state supreme court justice he had worn 22 years, today became Alabama's 39th governor.

Standing on the same spot where 70 years before Jefferson Davis pledged himself to the service of the confederacy, Gov. Miller paid tribute to the memory of the great Virginian.

Miller renewed a campaign pledge of economy and urged the legislature to cooperate in eliminating "dead wood" from the state's payroll. He urged strict enforcement of the prohibition law and characterized "it not an experiment but a noble principle" written permanently into the federal constitution and state statutes.

CHAIRMAN DELIVERS IT PERSONALLY BEFORE 9 A. M. TODAY

PUBLICATION TO COME AFTER ITS DELIVERY TO CONGRESS

Washington, Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — The report of the Wickersham commission was sent to the White House by the commission today.

Chairman George Wickersham, carrying the voluminous report in a plain Manila envelope, personally went to the White House before 9 A. M. and before there was much activity in the vicinity of the president's office, and delivered the document to one of the president's secretaries.

From the White House Wickersham drove immediately to his home.

At the commission's offices later he refused to make any statement regarding the report. He was the sole commissioner at the commission's offices this morning.

Its main work done, the commission is not expected to meet again for several weeks.

Publication of the prohibition report will come probably tomorrow, when it is expected to be delivered to congress. The president had not yet reached the executive offices when Wickersham arrived. The report was on his desk, however, when he came soon after 9 A. M. He expected to devote most of the day to a study of the document.

The report covers 289 printed pages and is estimated to contain approximately 90,000 words.

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Jan. 19. — Findings of the Wickersham commission are expected by many to provide the foundation for President Hoover's prohibition policy in his campaign for re-election next year.

The report marks an epoch in history of prohibition. It constitutes an expert judgement on the first decade of what Mr. Hoover described as "an experiment noble in motive and far reaching in purpose."

Completion of the prohibition report closes the most turbulent and important chapter in the work of the national commission on law observance and enforcement. Though the commission, under the chairmanship of George W. Wickersham, is engaged in many studies of crime, the highly surcharged prohibition problem has monopolized its chief attention. Time and again the commission has been criticized in congress for lack of speed.

Just a year ago when the work was only six months under way, pressure became so great that the commission hastily prepared a preliminary report, part of which has already been enacted into law. The commission has been at work twenty months. It has received total appropriations of one-half million dollars.

No federal body in years has undertaken as complicated a task and none except the United States supreme court has worked with such secrecy. As soon as the commission was appointed, it fortified itself within soundproof doors in the top of the Tower building near the Department of Justice. There a woman educator and ten lawyers, three of them federal judges, carried on the most extensive investigation of prohibition that ever has been made. Dozens of witnesses were heard in secret. Countless conferences have been held. But the secrecy as to what the commission was thinking continued impenetrable.

Chairman Wickersham gave what little cheerful atmosphere was to be found in the profound precincts of this array of legal talent sitting as a kind of unofficial supreme court on the fate of federal prohibition.

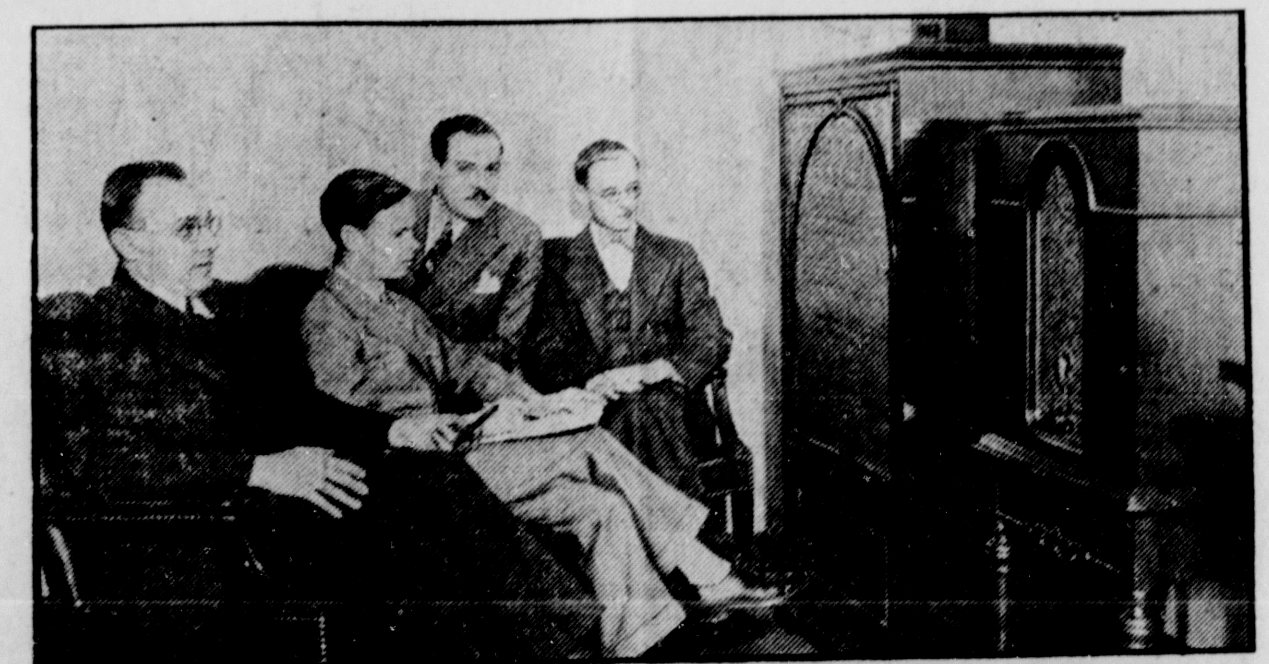

Short, stocky, fond of dining out, a frequent guest at embassy functions here, Wickersham has carried his seventy-two busy years lightly even during the stormiest days. When the commission was bitterly divided, Wickersham would emerge from a tense session and walk briskly down the hall, whistling. Asked about the latest report that the commission was going to restore beer, Wickersham's eyes would twinkle, as if he were about to let out a secret. Then he would throw up his hands and say, "That's purely conjectural."

He has been the "bad boy" of the commission because he could not always hold his bubbling spirits within the grim confines of secrecy set up by the commission. Once he replied to a question about restoration of 2.75 per cent beer by retorting that it wouldn't "satisfy any healthy appetite." He advocated the whipping post as a possible cure for some forms of crime. He wrote a letter to Governor Franklin Roosevelt of New York which when made public by the governor, raised a nation-wide storm.

He suggested that the governors of the states should work toward undertaking internal police regulations to prevent saloons, speakeasies and the like while the national government

COST OF STRUCTURE WILL BE ABOUT $250,000, REPORTED BY ST. PAUL DAILY NEWS

Here is a new state public institution, Brainerd, center of the state, is a desirable location, fulfilling requirements halfway between St. Paul and Duluth.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — The St. Paul Daily News said today that a federal prison farm may be established in Minnesota within the next year and a half.

Though the exact location of the farm has not been determined, it was believed that it would be built about halfway between St. Paul and Duluth, the News said.

Cost of the structure will be about $250,000 and informal sketches and estimates have been prepared by Sanford Bates, superintendent of prisons. Judge John B. Sanborn, St. Paul, U. S. district judge, and Attorney General W. D. Mitchell, were reported to be backers of the proposed farm.

INCARCERATION IS DUE TO NOT READING PAPERS

TWO MEN WITH LONG CRIMINAL RECORDS MAKE RUEFUL ADMISSION

BANDITS HID MONEY IN TREE, IT'S RECOVERED AND ROBBERS CAPTURED

Chicago, Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — Two men with long criminal records ruefully admitted today that their incarceration was due to not reading the newspapers.

On Saturday afternoon, three men robbed the Oak Lawn Trust & Savings Bank of Oak Lawn of $3,470. Running from the institution with their loot, they wounded Police Sgt. Fred O'Brien, who was passing.

Fred Behrend, 22, who is employed near the bank, witnessed the escape, and gave chase. Although outdistanced by the robbers, Behrend saw them place the money in a hollow willow tree. When the robbers disappeared, Behrend picked up the money and returned it to the bank.

Yesterday, two men returned to the willow. As one of them sought the money supposedly hidden there, nine policemen charged upon him. He ran to a waiting automobile and escaped with his companion, only to be captured after their machine had turned over after a long chase. At headquarters where they were identified by witnesses, they gave their names as Louis Kasper, 35, and John Bartz, 38, both of Chicago.

There they discovered that their capture was due to their not having read the Saturday night newspapers. In them were accounts of the robbery, the recovery of the cached money, and the plans of police to wait at the willow tree until the robbers returned for their loot.

SEARCH STARTED FOR SURVIVORS OF THE SITARAM

Suva, Fiji Islands, Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — A search was started today for survivors of the motorship Sitaram, reported foundered off the northern coast of the Vita Levu Island.

Although details of the accident were lacking, it was believed several of the passengers aboard the boat had lost their lives.

The Sitaram plied between various ports of the Vita Levu Island—one of the largest of the Fiji group.

Media, Pa., Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — A bill permitting the flogging of prisoners in Pennsylvania has been drawn up by Judge Albert Dutton McDade and will be introduced at the present session of the general assembly, he said today.

"It is the only way to stamp out crime among a certain class of criminals," the judge declared. The bill provides whippings for many statutory offenses.

LIGHT SNOW IS GENERAL OVER NORTHWEST

HEAVY BLANKET, 10 INCHES DEEP, IN SOME PLACES IN IOWA

GOLF AND TENNIS MAY NOW GIVE WAY TO TRADITIONAL WINTER SPORTS

Minneapolis, Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — Winter sports enthusiasts who started their annual sports play week without any snow or cold weather became optimistic today when the U. S. weather bureau forecast snow and colder temperatures.

Light snow was general over the northwest today and was reported heading for the Twin Cities.

The annual midwinter sports week here started yesterday with golf and tennis programs substituted for snow modelling and toboggan races at the last moment.

The city park board collected all the snow they could find from ravines and gullies and covered a ski slide so that the ski jumping events could be run off.

On the golf course where the ski slide is located golfers competed in a special midwinter tournament.

With the predictions of colder weather and snow program officials hoped they could eliminate the golf and tennis and carry on some of the more traditional winter sports.

In Iowa the state was covered by a heavy blanket of snow that reached 10 inches at some points.

Two persons were killed in the midwest in traffic accidents blamed on the storm which extended over the Great Lakes area. In Chicago snow fell all day yesterday but melted as rapidly as it fell.

White Bear, Minn., Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — The airplane propeller of his ice boat struck and fatally injured George Gere, Jr., St. Paul, here yesterday. Gere was removing a peg from beneath the boat when the whirling propeller blade hit him on the head, fracturing his skull.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — Heavy snowfall tied up the ice boats here for the Northwestern Ice Yacht Association's regatta and caused postponement of its opening races, scheduled for today.

Skippers of speedy sailboats from Kalamazoo, Detroit, Menominee, Oshkosh, Milwaukee, Madison and other points awaited the possibility of a thaw before the end of the week to clear the course of Lake Mendota.

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — A 79 degree temperature split developed in western Canada today.

Chetfield inlet on the shores of Hudson Bay reported 40 below while Lethbridge, Alta., on the western prairies had 39 degrees above zero.

Other temperatures were Medicine Hat, 36 above and Churchill, Man., 30 below.

MINISTER'S SON IS ALABAMA'S 39TH GOVERNOR TODAY

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — B. M. Miller, Presbyterian minister's son, who four years ago laid aside robes of judge and state supreme court justice he had worn 22 years, today became Alabama's 39th governor.

Standing on the same spot where 70 years before Jefferson Davis pledged himself to the service of the confederacy, Gov. Miller paid tribute to the memory of the great Virginian.

Miller renewed a campaign pledge of economy and urged the legislature to cooperate in eliminating "dead wood" from the state's payroll. He urged strict enforcement of the prohibition law and characterized "it not an experiment but a noble principle" written permanently into the federal constitution and state statutes.

VOLUMINOUS FINDINGS BY THE COMMISSION

CHAIRMAN DELIVERS IT PERSONALLY BEFORE 9 A. M. TODAY

PUBLICATION TO COME AFTER ITS DELIVERY TO CONGRESS

Washington, Jan. 19. — (U.P.) — The report of the Wickersham commission was sent to the White House by the commission today.

Chairman George Wickersham, carrying the voluminous report in a plain Manila envelope, personally went to the White House before 9 A. M. and before there was much activity in the vicinity of the president's office, and delivered the document to one of the president's secretaries.

From the White House Wickersham drove immediately to his home.

At the commission's offices later he refused to make any statement regarding the report. He was the sole commissioner at the commission's offices this morning.

Its main work done, the commission is not expected to meet again for several weeks.

Publication of the prohibition report will come probably tomorrow, when it is expected to be delivered to congress. The president had not yet reached the executive offices when Wickersham arrived. The report was on his desk, however, when he came soon after 9 A. M. He expected to devote most of the day to a study of the document.

The report covers 289 printed pages and is estimated to contain approximately 90,000 words.

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Jan. 19. — Findings of the Wickersham commission are expected by many to provide the foundation for President Hoover's prohibition policy in his campaign for reelection next year.

The report marks an epoch in history of prohibition. It constitutes an expert judgement on the first decade of what Mr. Hoover described as "an experiment noble in motive and far reaching in purpose."

Completion of the prohibition report closes the most turbulent and important chapter in the work of the national commission on law observance and enforcement. Though the commission, under the chairmanship of George W. Wickersham, is engaged in many studies of crime, the highly surcharged prohibition problem has monopolized its chief attention. Time and again the commission has been criticized in congress for lack of speed.

Just a year ago when the work was only six months under way, pressure became so great that the commission hastily prepared a preliminary report, part of which has already been enacted into law. The commission has been at work twenty months. It has received total appropriations of one-half million dollars.

No federal body in years has undertaken as complicated a task and none except the United States supreme court has worked with such secrecy. As soon as the commission was appointed, it fortified itself within sound-proof doors in the top of the Tower building near the Department of Justice. There a woman educator and ten lawyers, three of them federal judges, carried on the most extensive investigation of prohibition that ever has been made. Dozens of witnesses were heard in secret. Countless conferences have been held. But the secrecy as to what the commission was thinking continued impenetrable.

Chairman Wickersham gave what little cheerful atmosphere was to be found in the profound precincts of this array of legal talent sitting as a kind of unofficial supreme court on the fate of federal prohibition.

Short, stocky, fond of dining out, a frequent guest at embassy functions here, Wickersham has carried his seventy-two busy years lightly even during the stormiest days. When the commission would emerge from a tense session and walk briskly down the hall, whistling. Asked about the latest report that the commission was going to restore beer, Wickersham's eyes would twinkle, as if he were about to let out a secret. Then he would throw up his hands and say, "That's purely conjectural."

He has been the "bad boy" of the commission because he could not always hold his bubbling spirits within the grim confines of secrecy set up by the commission. Once he replied to a question about restoration of 2.75 per cent beer by retorting that it wouldn't "satisfy any healthy appetite." He advocated the whipping post as a possible cure for some forms of crime. He wrote a letter to Governor Franklin Roosevelt of New York which when made public by the governor, raised a nation-wide storm. He suggested that the governors of the states should work toward undertaking internal police regulations to prevent saloons, speakeasies and the like while the national government

OH THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

Copyright 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Another letter protesting that married women have the right to work and that they do better work than the unmarried "silly flappers."

Not all unmarried workers are silly flappers. Remember that. And not all married women use their money for necessities. Too many of them spend their incomes on themselves alone. The husbands don't get a new hanky out of the weekly stipend. Some of them—I have one in mind now—put the income in a bank in their own name, and let the husband pay for a maid, which he can't well afford, and if they decide on divorce, (if she decides) then she will have a little more than her alimony. And you can bet a woman who will work the game that way will get alimony, or else. I know the breed.

Now don't jump on my shivering frame if I say that I think in these hard times, a girl who isn't married, who hasn't anybody to care for her, but who must, perhaps take care of some member of her family, is certainly more entitled to a job than the woman who has a husband who has a job.

The woman who protested so angrily yesterday, admitted her husband has a good job and she hires a maid, yet because a girl is a flapper and powder her nose too often, she hasn't as good a right to the job as the woman with the husband. Flappers powder their noses because they want to get husbands, and they want husbands for many reasons, one of which is to have someone to pay the bills so they can keep house. It's the women with homes who want to work and the women with jobs who want homes.

Youth is going to be young and you can't change that. Youth that is pretty in these days of strong competition, is going to try to be a little prettier than the next girl, by using cosmetics. Why not? Of course some girls spend more than half their time doling up, but married women are quite as foolish, and they have, perhaps, less reason to be. They have caught their fish. So don't put all the onus on the poor young things.

Married women, especially those who aren't exactly happy at home, sometimes resent pretty young girls. They wish they could be that foolish. They can remember when they were and that emphasizes the fact that they are past their prettiest youth. Women who know youth has slipped away aren't going to let anything slip away if they can help it.

I don't mean all married women or all married workers.

There are women who need jobs and women who don't. What you mean is that women who don't need them should bow to those who do. But that is Utopia. Unfortunately this is just a nice old earth full of people who are full of imperfections. (If I'm wrong, write me care King Features Syndicate, 235 East 45th St. New York City.)

KOUTZEN RECITAL ENTHUSES HEARERS

Brainerd Musical Club Sponsors Concert of Brilliant Russian Violinist

MASTER OF TECHNIQUE

Audience Privileged to Hear Three Numbers of His Own Composition

The Brainerd Musical club had the great pleasure, yesterday afternoon, of listening to a concert by the brilliant young Russian violinist, Boris Koutzen. Throughout the entire program Mr. Koutzen showed himself a master of memory, technic and interpretation.

The first group, the only one of the classical period, consisted of the Correlli Partita in E minor and the Corelli Kreutzer LaPolla. The various movements in the Bach selection he interpreted with exquisite appreciation of their varying moods. There was a very masterly playing of the prelude with force and brilliancy that shaded to a tender appreciation of the adagio and then shifted to a gay and spirited handling of the Allemande and Gigue.

The second group, Cnausson's Poeme, gave excellent opportunity for both Miss Lindstrom and Mr. Koutzen to show the handling of their respective instruments. The harmony between the two instruments and their players resulted in an especially beautiful interpretation of the sadness that is the dominating theme of the "Joeme." This exceedingly difficult work was played with a very real appreciation of the beauty of the overtones and was easily the most important number on the program.

In the next group the audience was privileged to hear three numbers of Mr. Koutzen's own composition; a tender study of his own people in the "Legende," a hauntingly sad "Nocturne" and a charming arrangement of Tchaikowsky's Russian Dance.

The Spanish group which closed the program was a tribute to the ability of both artists, for on the violin were most remarkable guitar and flageolet effects that added effectiveness to the beauty of the numbers. Miss Lindstrom played the difficult accompaniment with a skill that showed how truly accomplished an artist she is in her own right. The program ended with Sarasate's introduction and Tarantella which afforded the violinist ample scope for his remarkable ability to procure unusual effects in runs and trills of great speed. At all times did Mr. Koutzen handle his violin in masterly style, interpret feeling in exquisite fashion, and leave his audience with the feeling that here is a master.

OH THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

Copyright 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Another letter protesting that married women have the right to work and that they do better work than the unmarried "silly flappers."

Not all unmarried workers are silly flappers. Remember that. And not all married women use their money for necessities. Too many of them spend their incomes on themselves alone. The husbands don't get a new hanky out of the weekly stipend. Some of them—I have one in mind now—put the income in a bank in their own name, and let the husband pay for a maid, which he can't well afford, and if they decide on divorce, (if she decides) then she will have a little more than her alimony. And you can bet a woman who will work the game that way will get alimony, or else. I know the breed.

Now don't jump on my shivering frame if I say that I think in these hard times, a girl who isn't married, who hasn't anybody to care for her, but who must, perhaps take care of some member of her family, is certainly more entitled to a job than the woman who has a husband who has a job.

The woman who protested so angrily yesterday, admitted her husband has a good job and she hires a maid, yet because a girl is a flapper and powder her nose too often, she hasn't as good a right to the job as the woman with the husband. Flappers powder their noses because they want to get husbands, and they want husbands for many reasons, one of which is to have someone to pay the bills so they can keep house. It's the women with homes who want to work and the women with jobs who want homes.

Youth is going to be young and you can't change that. Youth that is pretty in these days of strong competition, is going to try to be a little prettier than the next girl, by using cosmetics. Why not? Of course some girls spend more than half their time dolling up, but married women are quite as foolish, and they have, perhaps, less reason to be. They have caught their fish. So don't put all the onus on the poor young things.

Married women, especially those who aren't exactly happy at home, sometimes resent pretty young girls. They wish they could be that foolish. They can remember when they were and that emphasizes the fact that they are past their prettiest youth. Women who know youth has slipped away aren't going to let anything slip away if they can help it.

I don't mean all married women or all married workers.

There are women who need jobs and women who don't. What you mean is that women who don't need them should have to those who do. But that, is Utopia. Unfortunately this is just a nice old earth full of people who are full of imperfections.

KOUTZEN RECITAL
ENTHUSES HEARERS

Brainerd Musical Club Sponsors Concert of Brilliant Russian Violinist

MASTER OF TECHNIQUE

Audience Privileged to Hear Three Numbers of His Own Composition

The Brainerd Musical club had the great pleasure, yesterday afternoon, of listening to a concert by the brilliant young Russian violinist, Boris Koutzen. Throughout the entire program Mr. Koutzen showed himself a master of memory, technique and interpretation.

The first group, the only one of the classical period, consisted of Bach's Partita in E minor and the Corelli-Kreiser LaFolia. The various movements in the Bach selection he interpreted with exquisite appreciation of their varying moods. There was a very masterly playing of the prelude with force and brilliancy that shaded to a tender appreciation of the adagio and then shifted to a gay and spirited handling of the Allemande and Gigue.

The second group, Cnausson's Poeme, gave excellent opportunity for both Miss Lindstrom and Mr. Koutzen to show the handling of their respective instruments. The harmony between the two instruments and their players resulted in an especially beautiful interpretation of the sadness that is the dominating theme of the "Joeme." This exceedingly difficult work was played with a very real appreciation of the beauty of the overtones and was easily the most important number on the program.

In the next group the audience was privileged to hear three numbers of Mr. Koutzen's own composition; a tender study of his own people in the "Legende," a hauntingly sad "Nocturne" and a charming arrangement of Tchaikowsky's Russian Dance.

The Spanish group which closed the program was a tribute to the ability of both artists, for on the violin were most remarkable guitar and flageolet effects that added effectiveness to the beauty of the numbers. Miss Lindstrom played the difficult accompaniment with a skill that showed how truly accomplished an artist she is in her own right. The program ended with Sarasate's introduction and Tarantella which afforded the violinist ample scope for his remarkable ability to procure unusual effects in runs and crochets of great speed. At all times did Mr. Koutzen handle his violin in masterly style, interpret feeling in exquisite fashion, and leave his audience with the feeling that here is a master.

BUYING CONFIDENCE BACK, PENNEY ASSERTS

St. Paul, Jan. 19.—(U.P.)—Prices that have reached a 20-year low have restored public confidence in buying, J. C. Penney, chain store head, said today.

Penney, who was here for a district conference with sales representatives, said his firm had received more orders in its New York stores in the first week of January than in the whole month last year.

"This buying does not seem to be spasmodic," Penney said, "I see no reason why it should not continue although I refuse to predict. From our sales so far this month every reason exists for a continued upturn in business."

Lost!

The minister having failed to appear at the hour for service at a church in a Highland glen, one of the elders, a sheep farmer, entered the pulpit to conduct the service.

He got through the preliminary exercises without mishap, and then gave out the text: "I am the good shepherd." Three times he repeated the words "I am the good shepherd," but could proceed no further.

"No, no, Donald, you better come down," said a member seated in a front pew; "you're just a common sheep like one of ourselves."

Too Prolonged an Experiment

Somerset Maugham, playwright and novelist, says that the wittiest after-dinner speech he has ever heard was made by an American at a London dinner party. To the visitor had been allotted the toast of "The Ladies." He began by saying that a distinguished man of letters had suggested that marriage should be on the basis of a seven years' lease, renewable at the option of both parties.

Followed a pause. Then—with sad deliberation: "Now, gentlemen, seven years is a very long time."—Kansas City Times.

Reversing the Route

Two workmen were having a quiet chat.

"Who's that chap over there in the blue overalls?" asked Ted of his companion.

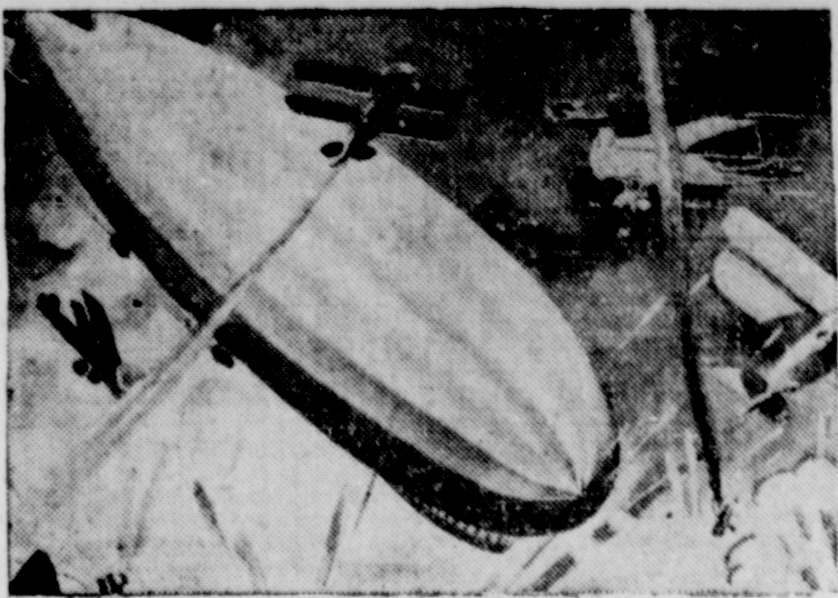

"That's the boss' son. He's working as a laborer," came the reply.

"I see," ventured Ted; "starting at the bottom and working his way up."

"No," replied his companion. "He started at the top and they pushed him down!"

should concentrate on suppressing interstate commerce in liquor.

Another dominant figure in the commission's internal struggle over prohibition was Federal Judge William S. Kenyon. He was formerly a progressive republican senator from Iowa, one of the authors of the Webb-Kenyon act of pre-prohibition times which prevented shipment of liquor into a dry state. Always independent in party affairs, Kenyon became disgusted with politics after the war. Though his popularity in Iowa almost insured him a seat in the senate indefinitely, he resigned and asked President Harding to appoint him to the federal bench. A strong dry, Kenyon was the chief member who prodded the commission in its prohibition studies.

Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War under Woodrow Wilson and understood to oppose many features of present prohibition policy, also was an active member, taking issue with dryer members of the commission. Dean Roscoe Pond of the Harvard Law School, noted for his outspoken disregard of some of the orthodox views of the legal profession, was another provocative commissioner.

Eight of the commissioners are republicans and three are democrats. They come from all sections. The prohibition of some were not clearly known when the commission was appointed though it was generally regarded as having a dry majority of at least one with the chairman regarded as tending toward modification.

Though the commission has been regarded as being concerned with prohibition chiefly, it was created under a law signed by Calvin Coolidge the day he retired from the presidency, providing $250,000 for a "thorough inquiry into the problem of the enforcement of prohibition under the eighteenth amendment and laws enacted in pursuance thereof, together with the enforcement of other laws."

On the same day President Hoover announced in his inaugural address his intention to appoint a commission "for a searching investigation of the whole structure of our federal system of jurisprudence, to include the method of enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and the causes of abuse under it." He appointed the commission May 20, 1929.

Last summer the commission sought a second $250,000 appropriation which stirred the criticism of its work in congress. On a point of order in the house by Rep. Laguardia, anti-prohibitionist republican of New York, the entire item was thrown out.

President Hoover then declared he indicated he would raise necessary funds through private sources if the money was not appropriated. Whereupon both houses of congress passed the full appropriation.

Under pressure from congress, the commission made its first and only other report in November, 1929. It was sent to congress by President Hoover January 13, 1930. Five bills embodying the commission's recommendations were introduced. Two of these, one transferring prohibition enforcement machinery from the treasury department to the justice department and another reducing for minor violators the heavy "five and ten" penalties of the Jones law have become law. Three other bills seeking to suspend trial by jury under certain conditions and otherwise simplifying federal court procedure have not been finally enacted and are expected to die with the present congress because of strong opposition.

Satan, as a master, is bad; his work much worse; and his wages worst of all.—Fuller.

Mother Nature Provides

Protection for Insects

Many animals, birds, fish and insects are shaped and colored by nature in such a way as to protect them from their enemies. This marvelous provision is seen at its best in some new groups of stick insects and leaf insects which recently arrived at the zoo. The stick insects have come from the East Indies, and they are of a light greenish-brownish color, measuring from 2 inches to 4 or 6 inches in length. They are very thin, indeed, and they are so much like tiny twigs or sticks that it is almost impossible to distinguish them from their surroundings. They imitate the twigs exactly, folding their slender legs close to their bodies, and hanging from the smaller branches just like leafless stalks. Leaf insects are of a bright green tint, and are shaped exactly like leaves, their wings being folded over one another and marked with veins. Even their six legs are shaped like smaller leaves; and as they hunt among the foliage of trees for the smaller insects they feed upon, they are quite safe from the birds, which think they are merely leaves.—London Answers.

Pilgrims Attracted to

Historic Swiss Church

The wanderer in the heart of the "Franconian Switzerland" sees from afar the two towers of the "Church of the Pictures of the Holy Trinity," which celebrated its two hundredth anniversary recently. It is one of the most famous goals of pilgrims in Europe. For two centuries these have been coming to pray before its wonder-working picture of the Virgin. Most of the pilgrims still wear the costumes of an earlier day. When one of the Franciscan monks of the church dies the body is tied to a board and carried through Gossweinstein before being placed in a small niche in a catacomb-like cave dug into a cliff. The place in Gossweinstein is said to have served Richard Wagner as a model for the Gralsburg in "Parsifal."

Youth's Zestful Day

The zest of life does not endure forever. The days of pursuit pass and the days of reflection come, and the man who has singing through his memory what is noble and stirring, who can turn with joy and relief to those perpetual friends of his bookshelves, has laid up for himself true riches. It is a great thing for anyone that, before being plunged into the exacting work of his life, he should have had time in which to make himself familiar with some of the great things in his own history and literature, and with actings of deep minds on problems where the search is the reward.—Principal R. Bruce Taylor.

Summerless Year

The year 1816 is popularly known as "the year without a summer." Of course this term is a misnomer and is not to be taken literally. But in the northern states there were frosts in every month of the year, and similar adverse weather conditions prevailed in Great Britain, France, Spain, Italy, and other parts of Europe. Data collected by the weather bureau, however, show that the worst features of this summer were exaggerated by writers, and only a few of the less hardy crops and plants suffered from the cold during the summer of 1816.

Another dominant figure in the commission's internal struggle over prohibition was Federal Judge William S. Kenyon. He was formerly a progressive republican senator from Iowa, one of the authors of the Webb-Kenyon act of pre-prohibition times which prevented shipment of liquor into a dry state. Always independent in party affairs, Kenyon became disgusted with politics after the war. Though his popularity in Iowa almost insured him a seat in the senate indefinitely, he resigned and asked President Harding to appoint him to the federal bench. A strong dry, Kenyon was the chief member who produced the commission in its prohibition studies.

Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War under Woodrow Wilson and understood to oppose many features of present prohibition policy, also was an active member, taking issue with dryer members of the commission. Dean Roscoe Pond of the Harvard Law School, noted for his outspoken disregard of some of the orthodox views of the legal profession, was another provocative commissioner.

Eight of the commissioners are republicans and three are democrats. They come from all sections. The prohibition of some were not clearly known when the commission was appointed though it was generally regarded as having a dry majority of at least one with the chairman regarded as tending toward modification.

Though the commission has been regarded as being concerned with prohibition chiefly, it was created under a law signed by Calvin Coolidge the day he retired from the presidency, providing $250,000 for a "thorough inquiry into the problem of the enforcement of prohibition under the eighteenth amendment and laws enacted in pursuance thereof, together with the enforcement of other laws."

On the same day President Hoover announced in his inaugural address his intention to appoint a commission "for a searching investigation of the whole structure of our federal system of jurisprudence, to include the method of enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and the causes of abuse under it." He appointed the commission May 20, 1929.

Last summer the commission sought a second $250,000 appropriation which stirred the criticism of its work in congress. On a point of order in the house by Rep. Laguardia, anti-prohibitionist republican of New York, the entire item was thrown out.

President Hoover then declared he indicated he would raise necessary funds through private sources if the money was not appropriated. Whereupon both houses of congress passed the full appropriation.

Under pressure from congress, the commission made its first and only other report in November, 1929. It was sent to congress by President Hoover January 13, 1930. Five bills embodying the commission's recommendations were introduced. Two of these, one transferring prohibition enforcement machinery from the treasury department to the justice department and another reducing for minor violators the heavy "five and ten" penalties of the Jones law have become law. Three other bills seeking to suspend trial by jury under certain conditions and otherwise simplifying federal court procedure have not been finally enacted and are expected to die with the present congress because of strong opposition.

Mother Nature Provides Protection for Insects

Many animals, birds, fish and insects are shaped and colored by nature in such a way as to protect them from their enemies. This marvelous provision is seen at its best in some new groups of stick insects and leaf insects which recently arrived at the zoo. The stick insects have come from the East Indies, and they are of a light greenish-brownish color, measuring from 2 inches to 4 or 6 inches in length. They are very thin, indeed, and they are so much like tiny twigs or sticks that it is almost impossible to distinguish them from their surroundings. They imitate the twigs exactly, folding their slender legs close to their bodies, and hanging from the smaller branches just like leafless stalks. Leaf insects are of a bright green tint, and are shaped exactly like leaves, their wings being folded over one another and marked with veins. Even their six legs are shaped like smaller leaves; and as they hunt among the foliage of trees for the smaller insects they feed upon, they are quite safe from the birds, which think they are merely leaves.—London Answers.

Pilgrims Attracted to Historic Swiss Church

The wanderer in the heart of the "Franconian Switzerland" sees from afar the two towers of the "Church of the Pictures of the Holy Trinity," which celebrated its two hundredth anniversary recently. It is one of the most famous goals of pilgrims in Europe. For two centuries these have been coming to pray before its wonder-working picture of the Virgin. Most of the pilgrims still wear the costumes of an earlier day. When one of the Franciscan monks of the church dies the body is tied to a board and carried through Gossweinstein before being placed in a small niche in a catacomb-like cave dug into a cliff. The place in Gossweinstein is said to have served Richard Wagner as a model for the Gralsburg in "Parsifal."

Youth's Zestful Day

The zest of life does not endure forever. The days of pursuit pass and the days of reflection come, and the man who has singing through his memory what is noble and stirring, who can turn with joy and relief to those perpetual friends of his bookshelves, has laid up for himself true riches. It is a great thing for anyone that, before being plunged into the exacting work of his life, he should have had time in which to make himself familiar with some of the great things in his own history and literature, and with actings of deep minds on problems where the search is the reward.—Principal R. Bruce Taylor.

Summerless Year

The year 1816 is popularly known as "the year without a summer." Of course this term is a misnomer and is not to be taken literally. But in the northern states there were frosts in every month of the year, and similar adverse weather conditions prevailed in Great Britain, France, Spain, Italy, and other parts of Europe. Data collected by the weather bureau, however, show that the worst features of this summer were exaggerated by writers, and only a few of the less hardy crops and plants suffered from the cold during the summer of 1816.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth. Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Bills in Legislature Pertaining to Sports

NUMEROUS bills pertaining to sports will be introduced in the legislature within the next month. The two of the most interest to Minnesota sportsmen are the bill for legalization of state-wide boxing under local option and a bill for the legalization of a pari-mutuel betting system on horse races.

Enlargement of the state boxing commission from three to five members is included in the program that would bring professional boxing to many smaller cities of the state. At present boxing matches are allowed only in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth. "Exhibitions" are given in the smaller towns.

Legion posts in many cities are backing the move to legalize boxing throughout the state. Although no bill has yet been framed, sport followers believe a bill similar to the one introduced in 1927 to legalize horse racing will be brought up. The plan would provide a state racing commission to regulate and control horse and dog racing.

Adherents of horse racing claim such a bill would encourage establishment of a large nationally known race track in one of the metropolitan centers which would bring tourists from the east here for a combination of vacation in the lake country and for the horse racing. The bill would also encourage the horse breeding industry.

That Friendly Feeling

THAT friendly feeling which exists in the small neighborhood and which is lost sight of in the large city was exemplified last week in Maple Grove township where Joe Hood was sick.

A farm is like a factory. When the head of the industry is sick and has few assistants, the business will languish. There are pigs and cows and chickens to feed, cows to milk, barns which must be cleaned, hay and wood to be gotten in and other chores that must be done. A farm can run down very quickly when the help lags.

So when Joe Hood was sick at his home in Maple Grove township, and not able to do anything in the way of the necessary chores, the neighbors "surely were good," as the correspondent writes the Brainerd Dispatch. They got together, filled the barn with hay and hauled up a large pile of wood and sawed it up for them.

Friendly touches of good nature and human interest like this make the world kin. It is so different from a large city where a man's next door neighbor in a flat is not even on speaking terms and neither knows the name of the other.

Those "Blues" Songs

THE depression which existed for some period in the history of America has had a theme song which is grating on the nerves of many people—it's those so-called "blues" songs. Carrying little harmony and distinguished by the most lugubrious blue notes and other expressions including grunts, groans, etc., this type of so-called music should be about run out and should be succeeded by something of more hopeful native, anyway a song that gives expression to real artistry and conveys real pleasure to the auditor.

If there is "color" in music as well as "painting," it is surely time to change the color scheme of popular music and quit the "blue" for a more enlivening hue. Misery expressed in song or otherwise, adds to misery. No man or woman was ever stimulated to correct faults, to do something worthwhile, by merely drowning in a monotonous chant some hard luck story.

The negro spirituals carry a sort of wail, but it is refined and not to be compared with the "blue" songs.

Whole Minnesota Delegation for Knutson Bill

THE Minnesota delegation in Congress has adopted a resolution urging support of the Congressman Harold Knutson bill to fix minimum levels in the reservoir lakes of northern Minnesota. The fact is noted that a million persons visit the lake country annually and spend approximately $100,000,000.

The resolution states that "it is of the utmost importance that the attractiveness of our lakes be maintained in all their primeval glory."

SIX Minnesota towns each own an equal share of a new fire truck. The machine to be used for rural service in Shetek, Monroe, Springdale, Amiret, Custer and Tracy will not be used in the community proper of Tracy, the regular truck being retained for that purpose. With a flock of fires on simultaneously, the truck will be in as much demand as a Drinker respirator in an epidemic of spinal meningitis.

BRONKO NAGURSKI, former Gopher football All-American, will again head a touring basketball team. The new club will be known as Nagurski's Big Five and will play in many northwest cities. The team's roster will include former college and university stars including Bill Lundell, Cully Lidberg, Norsky Norquist and the Bronko himself.

FARMERS in the vicinity of Viewfield, S. D., are protesting at the increase of antelope in the country. They mingle with the cattle in the feeding grounds and eat with them. The alfalfa stacks attract the antelope.

UNEMPLOYMENT has had another odd feature. St. Paul reports that many women pay for the marriage license and also pay the preacher, as the unemployed male happens to have little cash on hand.

PENDING state legislation and laws necessary to the welfare of Minnesota farmers will be up for discussion at the twelfth annual meeting of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation to be held at St. Paul January 20, 21 and 22. Crow Wing county will be represented.

SEVERAL hundred members will attend the annual meeting of the Minnesota Livestock Breeders' association, which will be held January 23 at University Farm. Policies of the organization for the coming year will be adopted and officers elected.

TRANSIENT labor is congregating in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth awaiting the resumption of spring work.

RADIO APPEALS TO EVERYONE

Almost every form of entertainment has its enthusiastic group of advocates on one hand and of indifferent onlookers on the other. Radio alone seems to be universally popular. Undoubtedly, its appeal is explained by the wide variety of programs available.

It is curious how markedly tastes differ in radio entertainment. Visiting one home, jazz is a great favorite, and the moment the program changes there is a great scramble to shift to another station broadcasting a modern orchestra. With another family, jazz is taboo entirely, and orchestral music, classical or semi-classical in nature, is preferred. Other folks like plays, comedy teams, sports news, etc. Fortunately, there are enough stations broadcasting a sufficient number and variety of programs to enable each radio listener to have just about what he wishes.

Found His Interest

There are persons who claim to have no interest in radio. For instance, I recently entertained a musician. Early in the evening he stated that he really had very little use for his radio at home. Hardly a half hour had passed before he asked me if I would mind being sure to get a program scheduled later in the evening, at which Heifetz, the famous violinist, was to broadcast. When the great master played, my guest sat spellbound through the whole performance. "Wonderful," he said. "Heifetz is a real artist. It seemed as though we had him with us in this very room tonight."

Such is the attraction of radio even for those who "never use it." Of course, it developed that this musician, like some other persons, really does use the radio quite frequently when programs are being broadcast in which he is particularly interested.

Some day I may meet a man who really and sincerely does not like radio programs of any kind. He will be a man who is uninterested in the most startling news of the day, who does not care for music, is cold to the drama, sees no pleasure in dancing, is oblivious to politics and prohibition, churches and religion, and who finds nothing to laugh at in "Amos and Andy." I may meet such a man some day, but hardly think I shall desire to prolong the acquaintance.

Any Responses?

"Shakespeare says all men are liars. Advertiser desires to meet one who is not," read a want advertisement in a London newspaper recently.

The Drawing Lesson

The Nest.

What is this, a pile of rocks?
No, it can't be that;
This nest drawing's something like
A funny sort of hat.

What a terrible mistake!
It is a nest, I see;
And full of eggs—I wonder where
The little bird can be?

The Easter Bunny.

Draw two flower petals first,
And add a center, round;
Draw a line, a sort of stem,
That reaches to the ground.
Then in front, a sprig of grass,
But, say, this drawing's funny—
Why it is not a flower at all,
It is a perky bunny!

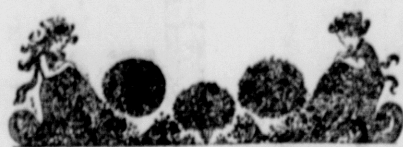

—Lucille Crites.

A House of Shell

Most of the curious things you pick up on the seashore are really wrecks—deserted houses, cut-off clothes, or outgrown cradles and rattles of some of the many strange and wonderful creatures that live in the sea.

One of the prettiest is a lovely box as white as snow, and more fragile than the thinnest china. It is covered with a pattern of tiny knobs and holes, that look like delicate carving, and it is round in shape, flattened on top exactly like a common white turnip. These boxes are found in a number of sizes, from little to big, the size of a pea to as big as the top of a drinking glass, and in some parts of the world as big as a dinner plate.

In this elegant house lived a very strange fellow called a sea urchin. His mouth opened on the under side of his body, where the larger hole is in the shell, and at that point he had five big teeth, quite able to cut his food. His house, this pretty box, was covered with long, sharp spines like thorns, that made him an unpleasant fellow to handle.

His feet were perhaps the oddest parts of him, though everything about him was strange. To begin with, he had dozens of them; one coming out of each of the holes on the shell. Then they could be stretched out as long as he wished, and the legs (you may call them that) were, of course, not larger than threads. The foot itself, at the end of each thread-like leg, was round and flat; and when the urchin wanted to walk he thrust out his feet on one side till they touched something, where they stuck, and held there, it is said, by drawing out the air under them; then he pulled himself along.

One of the most interesting things is the way the sea urchin grows. The baby sea urchin is about as big as the dot you make over a small i. You can just see it moving slowly about in the water; but with a microscope it proves to be an elegant little creature, of the oddest shape, perhaps more like a painter's easel than anything else. It is made of clear, glassy-looking rods, with rose-colored tips on some of the upper ones, and covered with little specks that reflect light, and made it very brilliant. It moves about by waving in the water filigees of delicate hairs, cilia the baby call them, and it is so very small that its waving of hairs will move it about.

How do you suppose the sea urchins' delicate shell house gets bigger? He never has but one, and when he was the size of a pin-head it was not too big for him, and when he is as large as a teacup it still fits him. Let me tell you. When the owner lived in it the box was made of several hundred plates, and covered by the thin skin of the living urchin. One work of this skin was to enlarge the house as fast as he grew, and it was done by constant adding of building material to the edges of each piece; thus each one became bigger, and yet they all always fitted together; so you may say that the box grew as well as the urchin that lived in it.

Surely more wonders were never packed into one small box; and we have not told you all, either.

Although no bill has yet been framed, sport followers believe a bill similar to the one introduced in 1927 to legalize horse racing will be brought up. The plan would provide a state racing commission to regulate and control horse and dog racing.

Adherents of horse racing claim such a bill would encourage establishment of a large nationally known race track in one of the metropolitan centers which would bring tourists from the east here for a combination of vacation in the lake country and for the horse racing. The bill would also encourage the horse breeding industry.

That Friendly Feeling

THAT friendly feeling which exists in the small neighborhood and which is lost sight of in the large city was exemplified last week in Maple Grove township where Joe Hood was sick.

A farm is like a factory. When the head of the industry is sick and has few assistants, the business will languish. There are pigs and cows and chickens to feed, cows to milk, barns which must be cleaned, hay and wood to be gotten in and other chores that must be done. A farm can run down very quickly when the help lags.

So when Joe Hood was sick at his home in Maple Grove township, and not able to do anything in the way of the necessary chores, the neighbors "surely were good," as the correspondent writes the Brainerd Dispatch. They got together, filled the barn with hay and hauled up a large pile of wood and sawed it up for them.

Friendly touches of good nature and human interest like this make the world kin. It is so different from a large city where a man's next door neighbor in a flat is not even on speaking terms and neither knows the name of the other.

Those "Blues" Songs

THE depression which existed for some period in the history of America has had a theme song which is grating on the nerves of many people—it's those so-called "blues" songs. Carrying little harmony and distinguished by the most lugubrious blue notes and other expressions including grunts, groans, etc., this type of so-called music should be about run out and should be succeeded by something of more hopeful native, anyway a song that gives expression to real artistry and conveys real pleasure to the auditor.

If there is "color" in music as well as "painting," it is surely time to change the color scheme of popular music and quit the "blue" for a more enlivening hue. Misery expressed in song or otherwise, adds to misery. No man or woman was ever stimulated to correct faults, to do something worthwhile, by merely drowning in a monotonous chant some hard luck story.

The negro spirituals carry a sort of wail, out it is refined and not to be compared with the "blues" songs.

Whole Minnesota Delegation for Knutson Bill

THE Minnesota delegation in Congress had adopted a resolution urging support of the Congressman Harold Knutson bill to fix minimum levels in the reservoir lakes of northern Minnesota. The fact is noted that a million persons visit the lake country annually and spend approximately $100,000,000.

The resolution states that "it is of the utmost importance that the attractiveness of our lakes be maintained in all their primeval glory."

SIX Minnesota towns each own an equal share of a new fire truck. The machine to be used for rural service in Shetek, Monroe, Springdale, Amiret, Custer and Tracy will not be used in the community proper of Tracy, the regular truck being retained for that purpose. With a flock of fires on simultaneously, the truck will be in as much demand as a Drinker respirator in an epidemic of spinal meningitis.

BRONKO NAGURSKI, former Gopher football All-American, will again head a touring basketball team. The new club will be known as Nagurski's Big Five and will play in many northwest cities. The team's roster will include former college and university stars including Bill Lundell, Cully Lidberg, Norsky Norquist and the Bronko himself.

FARMERS in the vicinity of Viewfield, S. D., are protesting at the increase of antelope in the country. They mingle with the cattle in the feeding grounds and eat with them. The alfalfa stacks attract the antelope.

UNEMPLOYMENT has had another odd feature. St. Paul reports that many women pay for the marriage license and also pay the preacher, as the unemployed male happens to have little cash on hand.

PENDING state legislation and laws necessary to the welfare of Minnesota farmers will be up for discussion at the twelfth annual meeting of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation to be held at St. Paul January 20, 21 and 22. Crow Wing county will be represented.

SEVERAL hundred members will attend the annual meeting of the Minnesota Livestock Breeders' association, which will be held January 23 at University Farm. Policies of the organization for the coming year will be adopted and officers elected.

TRANSIENT labor is congregating in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth awaiting the resumption of spring work.

RADIO APPEALS TO EVERYONE

Almost every form of entertainment has its enthusiastic group of advocates on one hand and of indifferent onlookers on the other. Radio alone seems to be universally popular. Undoubtedly, its appeal is explained by the wide variety of programs available.

It is curious how markedly tastes differ in radio entertainment. Visiting one home, jazz is a great favorite, and the moment the program changes there is a great scramble to shift to another station broadcasting a modern orchestra.

With another family, jazz is taboo entirely, and orchestral music, classical or semi-classical in nature, is preferred. Other folks like plays, comedy teams, sports news, etc. Fortunately, there are enough stations broadcasting a sufficient number and variety of programs to enable each radio listener to have just about what he wishes.

Found His Interest

There are persons who claim to have no interest in radio. For instance, I recently entertained a musician. Early in the evening he stated that he really had very little use for his radio at home. Hardly a half hour had passed before he asked me if I would mind being sure to get a program scheduled later in the evening, at which Heifetz, the famous violinist, was to broadcast. When the great master played, my guest sat spellbound through the whole performance.

"Wonderful," he said. "Heifetz is a real artist. It seemed as though we had him with us in this very room tonight."

Such is the attraction of radio even for those who "never use it." Of course, it developed that this musician, like some other persons, really does use the radio quite frequently when programs are being broadcast in which he is particularly interested.

Some day I may meet a man who really and sincerely does not like radio programs of any kind. He will be a man who is uninterested in the most startling news of the day, who does not care for music, is cold to the drama, sees no pleasure in dancing, is oblivious to politics and prohibition, churches and religion, and who finds nothing to laugh at in "Amos and Andy."

I may meet such a man some day, but hardly think I shall desire to prolong the acquaintance.

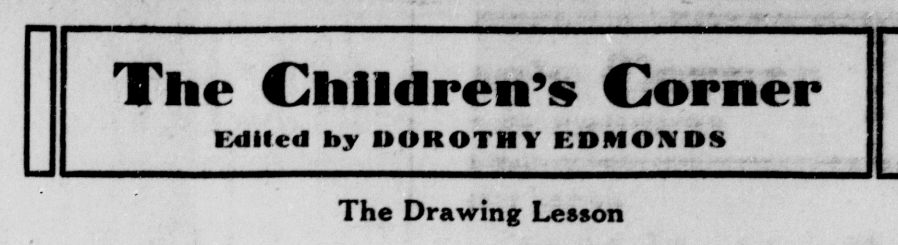

Any Responses?

The Drawing Lesson

The Nest.
What is this, a pile of rocks?
No, it can't be that;
This nest drawing's something like
A funny sort of hat.

The Easter Bunny.
Draw two flower petals first,
Add a center, round;
Draw a line, a sort of stem,
That reaches to the ground.
Then in front, a sprig of grass,
But, say, this drawing's funny—
Why it is not a flower at all,
It is a perky Bunny!

A House of Shell

Most of the curious things you pick up on the seashore are really wrecks—deserted homes, cast-off clothes, or outgrown cradles and caskets of some of the many strange and wonderful creatures that live in the sea.

One of the prettiest is a lovely box as white as snow, and more fragile than the thinnest china. It is covered with a pattern of tiny knobs and holes, that look like delicate carving, and it is round in shape, flattened on top exactly like a common white turnip. These boxes are found in a number of sizes, from little to big, the size of a pea to as big as the top of a drinking glass, and in some parts of the world as big as a dinner plate.

In this elegant house lived a very strange fellow called a sea urchin. His mouth opened on the under side of his body, where the larger hole is in the shell, and at that point he had five big teeth, quite able to cut his food. His house, this pretty box, was covered with long, sharp spines like thorns, that made him an unpleasant fellow to handle.

His feet were perhaps the oddest parts of him, though everything about him was strange. To begin with, he had dozens of them; one coming out of each of the holes on the shell. Then they could be stretched out as long as he wished, and the legs (you may call them that) were, of course, not larger than threads. The foot itself, at the end of each thread-like leg, was round and flat; and when

Surely more wonders were never packed into one small box; and we have not told you all, either.

WORLD'S RICHEST GOLF PRIZE IS AWARDED J. GOLDEN

SLAVIC PRO WINS $10,000 PRIZE AT AGUA CALIENTE

DEFEATS GEORGE VON ELM BY FOUR STROKES IN SUN-DAY PLAY-OFF

CARRIES AWAY PRIZE MONEY, AND DIVIDES GATE RECEIPTS WITH VON ELM

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Agua Caliente, Mexico, Jan. 19.—The world's richest golf prize, $10,000, was awarded today to John Golden, Slavic professional from the Wee Burn Club of Noroton, Conn.

By defeating George Von Elm of Los Angeles, former national amateur champion, by four strokes in an 18-hole play-off Sunday after tying with him at the end of 72 holes, each with 293 strokes, Golden was presented with a $10,000 check as first prize money in the second annual $25,000 Agua Caliente open tournament.

Although the official announcement was that Golden received first prize, and Von Elm second prize of $3,500, it was generally understood that they pooled the sum and each took $6,750 and the play-off was merely for the honor of winning the championship. In addition to the prize money, they divided the gate receipts for the play-off, about $1,000.

Superior putting and remarkable recoveries out of traps enabled Golden to conquer Von Elm in the play-off. Golden took the lead on the first hole with a birdie four, and was never behind although Von Elm evened the match on the eighth green.

Horton Smith, Cragston, N. Y., won third prize money of $2,000 in the Agua Caliente tournament with 293 strokes, the same total Gene Sarazen, Fresh Meadow, won with a year ago. There was a four-way tie for fourth place between Ed Dudley, Wilmington, Del., Los Angeles open champion, Clarence Clark, the Dutra brothers, Olin and Mortie of California. They had 296 strokes each for 72 holes and received $1,012.50 apiece.

The leading professionals were headed back to Los Angeles today to compete in the motion picture open match play tournament, last event on the mid-winter schedule in the far west, which will be held at Riviera Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Among those who will be missing in the motion picture tournament are Tommy Armour, Ed Dudley and Gene Sarazen, who will take up their duties at Florida clubs.

Accuracy from the free throw line took its toll again Saturday night. It cost the Gophers a tie for first place in the Big Ten.

Minnesota sank one charity shot out of a possible eight. Chicago hit 12 out of a possible 14 to win the game by one point. Nor is this the only game in our recollection that has been lost from the free throw line. Duluth Central lost a game here earlier in the season by the margin of one free throw. Brainerd lost several games last year by failure to turn free throws into points.

Just as the point after touchdown is important in football, so is the free throw important in basketball. Practice has a lot to do with making free throws—in other words all that some of these teams need is more practice from the free throw line.

His free throws count but a 50-50 average isn't an unfair one to expect. Had Minnesota hit 50 per cent the other night, they would have been on the long end of a 34-32 score no matter if the Maroons did sink 12 out of 14. Think that over!

Tuesday night Staples meets Sebeka. That should be easy going for Staples. And on Friday night Aitkin entertains Crosby-Ironton, and from what happened in the past, it would be giving the dope bucket an awful kick not to pick the Robins from the Range to win in a walk.

Wadena marches its forces into Brainerd that same night, and unless the warriors from Wadena are a lot tougher than we think they are, Bill Dammann's boys won't have much trouble despite the early season setback that Brainerd received at the neighboring town.

And then a night or so later Pequot journeys to Crosby-Ironton. Who will win that battle? I'll close my eyes—now you guess! That evening should give Mr. Woock plenty of time to go on a scouting trip over the district.

And the same evening Brainerd goes marching up to Staples for what should easily be the best game of the district this week-end. Brainerd won't have any Mr. Alden to fear this year, but they will have their hands full just the same for Staples is always a plenty hard outfit to beat on their own floor.

Down in the Twin Cities, the boys are all pepped up over the King Tut-Billy Petrolle bout which is scheduled for Feb. 2. It should be a scrap worth seeing all right for both of those boys pack plenty of wallop. They have met before and although there has been some knockdowns on both sides, there hasn't been a knockout—yet! Tut won the last two bouts but since then the Fargo Express has been polishing off some of the big boys.

Yeah—I guess it was none other than the famous "Cannonball" Werner that was crying for a city hockey league not so long ago? What do the rest of you boys think about it? Want one?

It's funny but there has been no talk yet of the annual Lions-Rotarians basketball game. These boys who eat and sing together once a week should be doing something soon for our amusement.

Maybe that is all that he had better try to promote for the time being. You know life is just one promotion after another.

DESPITE 2 DEFEATS

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 19.—(U.P.)—Sport fans prepared today for one of the biggest college basketball attractions in years—the University of Minnesota-Wisconsin game at the university field house tonight.

The largest crowd which has ever watched a Minnesota team perform since the building of the field house will attend the game, according to the university ticket office.

Though both Minnesota and Wisconsin have been defeated in the Big Ten conference race, each team is given a good chance to finish among the leaders due to the narrow margin of superiority among the various entrants this year.

Wisconsin is a favorite to win tonight despite two defeats.

Minnesota lost by a single point to Chicago Saturday night. At the same time Wisconsin was defeating Iowa easily, 24-13. Experts pointed out that Minnesota's victory over Iowa was by a considerably narrower margin.

Chicago, Jan. 19.—(U.P.)—Hack Wilson, National League home run leader, will ask a salary of $40,000 from the Chicago Cubs for the 1931 season, it was reported today.

Wilson drew a salary of $22,500 during the 1930 season when he established a new world record for runs batted in and set a National League home run record of 56 to beat out Babe Ruth for the season's championship.

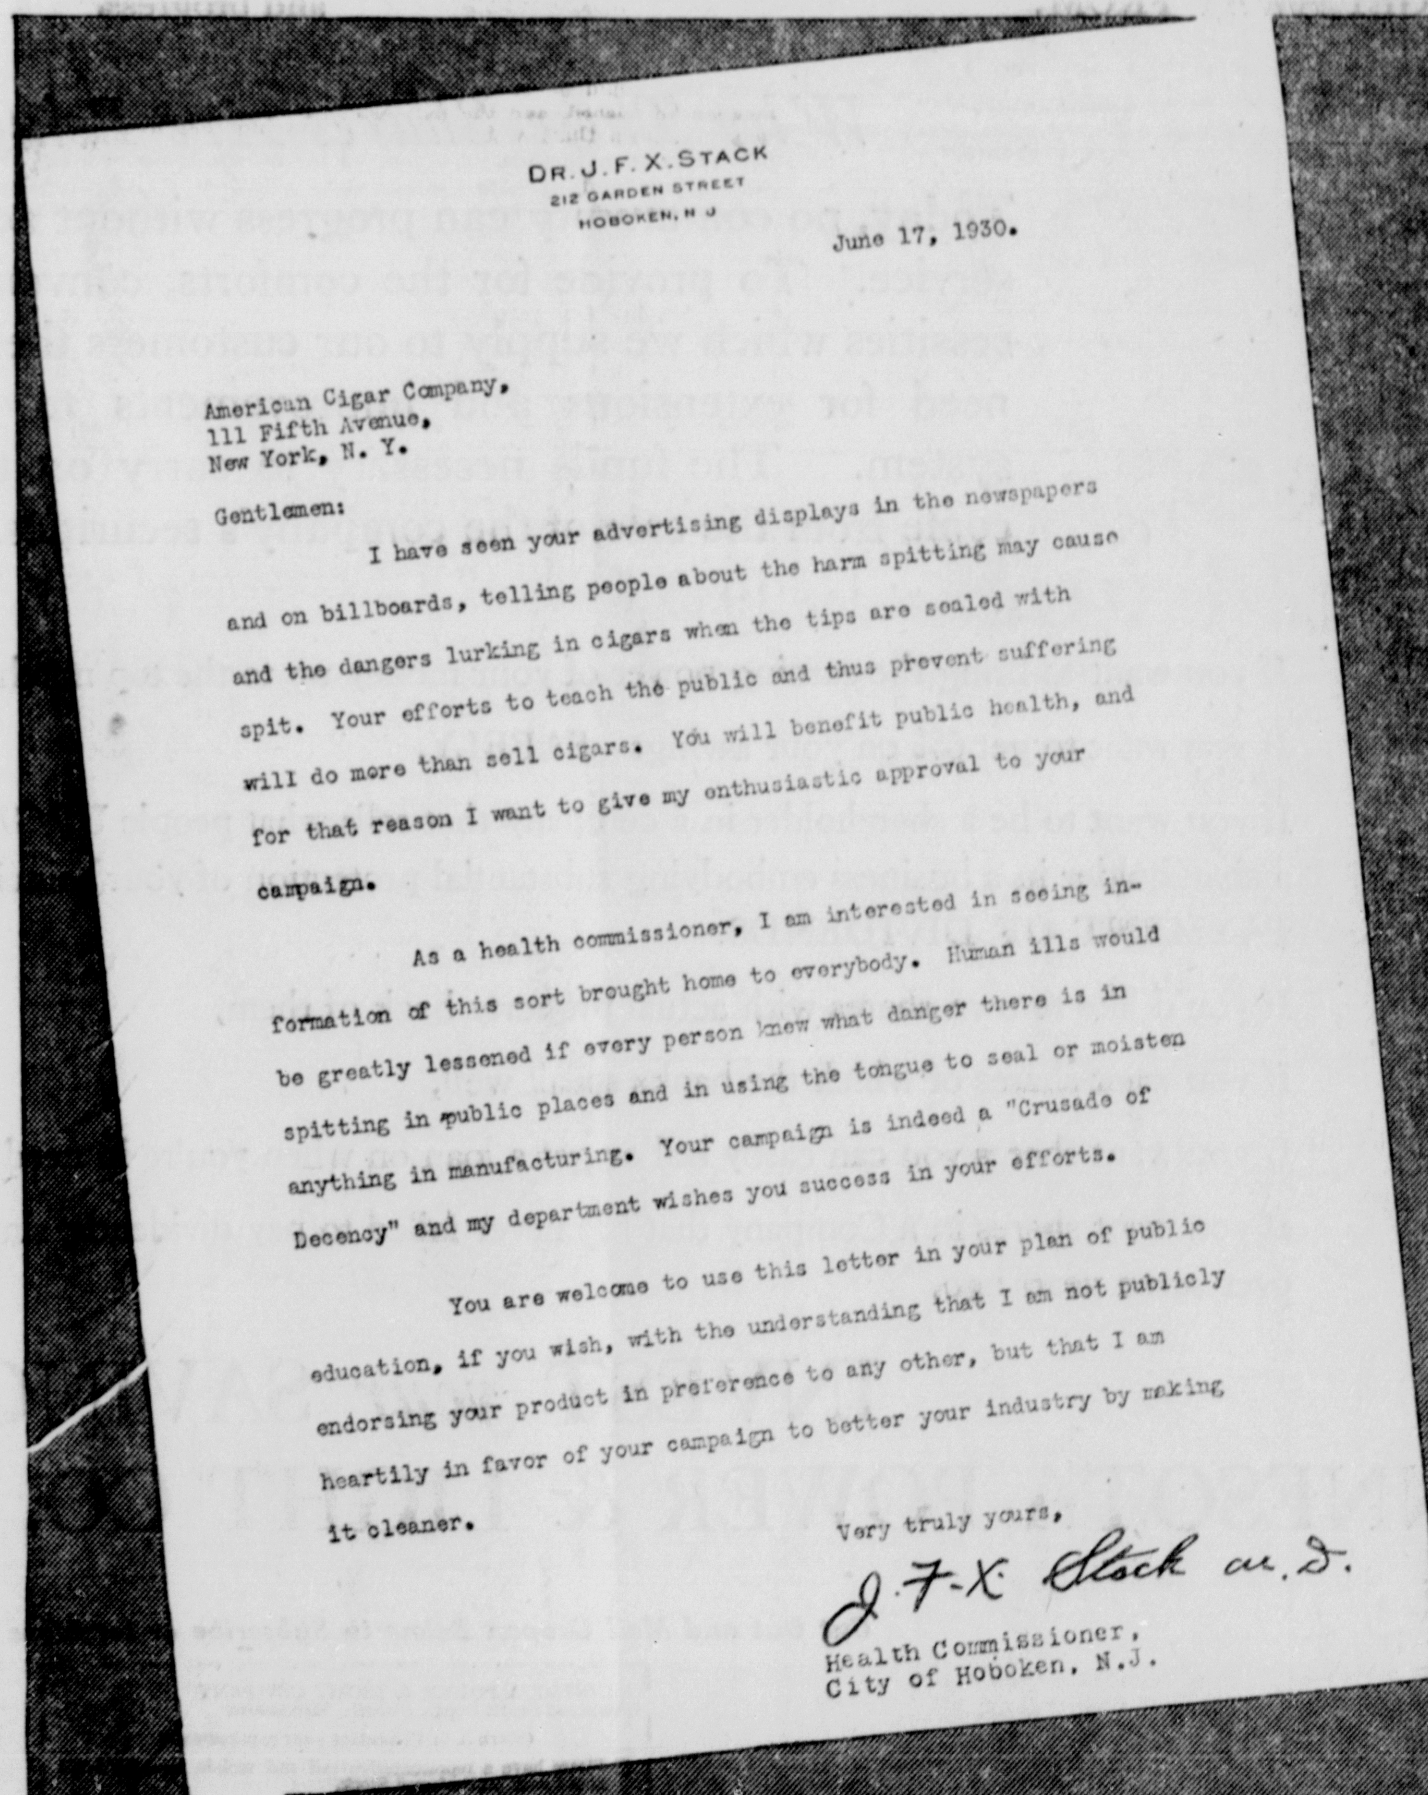

President William Veeck of the Cubs is vacationing in California, but is expected to return early in February for a salary conference with Wilson. The Cubs are believed ready to make an opening offer of $30,000 to Wilson.

Minnesota sank one charity shot out of a possible eight. Chicago hit 12 out of a possible 14 to win the game by one point. Nor is this the only game in our recollection that has been lost from the free throw line. Duluth Central lost a game here earlier in the season by the margin of one free throw. Brainerd lost several games last year by failure to turn free throws into points.

Just as the point after touchdown is important in football, so is the free throw important in basketball. Practice has a lot to do with making free throws—in other words all that some of these teams need is more practice from the free throw line.

His free throw count but a 50-50 average isn't an unfair one to expect. Had Minnesota hit 50 per cent the other night, they would have been on the long end of a 34-32 score no matter if the Maroons did sink 12 out of 14. Think that over!

Tuesday night Staples meets Sebeka. That should be easy going for Staples. And on Friday night Aitkin entertains Crosby-Ittron, and from what happened in the past, it would be giving the dope bucket an awful kick not to pick the Robins from the Range to win in a walk.

Wadena marches its forces into Brainerd that same night, and unless the warriors from Wadena are a lot tougher than we think they are, Bill Dammann's boys won't have much trouble despite the early season setback that Brainerd received at the neighboring town.

And then a night or so later Pequot journeys to Crosby-Ittron. Who will win that battle? I'll close my eyes—now you guess! That evening should give Mr. Woock plenty of time to go on a scouting trip over the district.

And the same evening Brainerd goes marching up to Staples for what should easily be the best game of the district this week-end. Brainerd won't have any Mr. Alden to fear this year, but they will have their hands full just the same for Staples is always a plenty hard outfit to beat on their own floor.

Down in the Twin Cities the boys are all pepped up over the King Tut-Billy Petrolle bout which is scheduled for Feb. 2. It should be a scrap worth seeing all right for both of those boys pack plenty of wallop. They have met before and although there has been some knockdowns on both sides, there hasn't been a knockout—yet! Tut won the last two bouts but since then the Fargo Express has been polishing off some of the big boys.

Yeah—I guess it was none other than the famous "Cannonball" Werner that was crying for a city hockey league not so long ago? What do the rest of you boys think about it? Want one?

It's funny but there has been no talk yet of the annual Lions-Rotarians basketball game. These boys who eat and sing together once a week should be doing something soon for our amusement.

Maybe that is all that he had better try to promote for the time being. You know life is just one promotion after another.

MINNESOTA MEETS WISCONSIN AT U FIELD HOUSE

EACH TEAM IS GIVEN A GOOD CHANCE TO FINISH AMONG THE LEADERS

WISCONSIN, HOWEVER, CONSIDERED FAVORITE TO WIN DESPITE 2 DEFEATS

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 19.—(U.P.)—Sport fans prepared today for one of the biggest college basketball attractions in years—the University of Minnesota-Wisconsin game at the university field house tonight.

The largest crowd which has ever watched a Minnesota team perform since the building of the field house will attend the game, according to the university ticket office.

Though both Minnesota and Wisconsin have been defeated in the Big Ten conference race, each team is given a good chance to finish among the leaders due to the narrow margin of superiority among the various entrants this year.

Wisconsin is a favorite to win tonight despite two defeats.

Minnesota lost by a single point to Chicago Saturday night. At the same time Wisconsin was defeating Iowa easily, 24-13. Experts pointed out that Minnesota's victory over Iowa was by a considerably narrower margin.

SHAMROCK PLAYERS ARGUE WITH REFEREE, TULSA WINS BATTLE, 2-0

Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 19.—Tulsa held a tighter grip on the lead position of the A. H. L. today by virtue of its 2-0 victory over the Chicago Shamrocks here Sunday afternoon.

Three Shamrock players drew a total of $40 fines near the close of the contest. Two $10 fines were imposed against Timmons, goalie, for demonstration after the first Oiler goal and for arguing with Referee Ed O'Leary a few minutes later. Brydson and Headley were involved in the same altercation and were each fined $10.

Kansas City, Jan. 19.—The Kansas City Pla-Mors and Buffalo Bulls battled to a scoreless deadlock in an Chicago's Blackhawks moved to within one point of the leading Boston Bruins in the American division of the National Hockey League last night by defeating the New York Rangers 2 to 1. It was Chicago's sixth consecutive victory.

Thompson saved the Rangers from a shutout by scoring in 10:10 of the final period. Ingram and Cook tallied for the Blackhawks. The game was enlivened by a third period fight between W. Cook of the Rangers and Des Jardiens of the Blackhawks.

In the only other game played last night the New York Americans and the Detroit Falcons battled to a 2-2 tie. Emms and Simpson scored for the New Yorkers, while McInenly and Serrell did Detroit's sharpshooting. The game was unusually peaceful, only six penalties being indicated.

HACK WILSON TO ASK HIGH SALARY

WANTS $40,000 FROM CHICAGO CUBS FOR 1931 SEASON, REPORTED

Chicago, Jan. 19.—(U.P.)—Hack Wilson, National League home run leader, will ask a salary of $40,000 from the Chicago Cubs for the 1931 season, it was reported today.

Wilson drew a salary of $22,500 during the 1930 season when he established a new world record for runs batted in and set a National League home run record of 56 to beat out Babe Ruth for the season's championship.

President William Veeck of the Cubs is vacationing in California, but is expected to return early in February for a salary conference with Wilson. The Cubs are believed ready to make an opening offer of $30,000 to Wilson.

"You Will Benefit Public Health"

Says

DR. J. F. X. STACK

Health Commissioner, City of Hoboken, N. J.

... one of 56 health officials from 56 different points approving Cremo's crusade against spit or spit-tipping.

Every smoker, every wife whose husband smokes cigars, should read Dr. Stack's letter.

"Who are the friends of 'Spit'?"

YOU MAY WELL ASK THIS QUESTION WHEN 56 IMPORTANT HEALTH OFFICIALS HAVE WRITTEN SO STRONGLY AGAINST THE EVILS OF SPIT OR SPIT-TIPPING.

Dr. Stack writes: "I am heartily in favor of your campaign to better your industry by making it cleaner."

The war against spit is a crusade of decency. Join it... Smoke Certified Cremo — a really wonderful smoke — mild — mellow — nut-sweet! Every leaf entering the clean, sunny Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture.

American Cigar Company,
111 Fifth Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

I have seen your advertising displays in the newspapers and on billboards, telling people about the harm spitting may cause and the dangers lurking in cigars when the tips are sealed with spit. Your efforts to teach the public and thus prevent suffering will do more than sell cigars. You will benefit public health, and for that reason I want to give my enthusiastic approval to your campaign.

As a health commissioner, I am interested in seeing information of this sort brought home to everybody. Human ills would be greatly lessened if every person knew what danger there is in spitting in public places and in using the tongue to seal or moisten anything in manufacturing. Your campaign is indeed a "Crusade of Decency" and my department wishes you success in your efforts.

You are welcome to use this letter in your plan of public education, if you wish, with the understanding that I am not publicly endorsing your product in preference to any other, but that I am heartily in favor of your campaign to better your industry by making it cleaner.

Very truly yours,

J. F. X. Stack M.D.
Health Commissioner,
City of Hoboken, N. J.

In this period of cold weather and cracked lips, above all insist on a cigar—free of the spit germ.

Career Mapped Out for Peter

By T. M. JACKSON

(Copyright.)

FROM the day Peter Gray was born, his mother anticipated his future. At first, that future dealt largely with certified milk, specialized diets and private kindergartens, but as Peter grew into a sturdy boyhood there arose the vital question of what he was going to make of himself.

When he was due to graduate from an expensive and exclusive prep school his mother went on to it for commencement. Also, to consult about her son with the men who had been his guides, philosophers and presumably friends. Surely, they would have detected in her Peter some bent, some flair which indicated the line along which he should be trained.

When she put the problem to Peter's mathematics instructor, that gentleman considered a moment before replying. Then, "Forgive me, Mrs. Gray," he said gently. "But really your boy hasn't brains enough to run a stop watch. Don't think I don't like Peter. I do. He simply hasn't any brains."

Taken rather aback—as who wouldn't have been—Peter's mother still hoped that the boy's English teacher could offer something more encouraging.

"Has my son any inclination for—er—writing or, possibly, poetry?" she began.

This time the answer was prompt enough. "Writing, Madam? Poetry? That most delicate of the arts? Lord, no! I like Peter immensely. But there is nothing of the artist about him."

Mrs. Gray made one more try. "Tell me," she pleaded of Jake Crowley, the athletic coach. "Is my boy good at sports?"

Jake threw back his massive head. "Lord love you, Mrs. Gray! Your Peter can't remember the difference between a hold and a tackle, a home run or a touchdown! But he makes a fine figure in running pants or plus fours and, gosh, how the girls adore him!"

When Peter's mother reached home, she told an intimate friend that her trip had proved invaluable inasmuch as it showed her unmistakably that for which her boy was most fitted. What that was she neglected to say, but the friend gathered that Peter's future would be shaped accordingly.

And so it was. Peter was sent to a fashionable college with plenty of money and a smart wardrobe.

During his vacation his mother entertained for him lavishly, including among other young buds of the season, Miss Patty Gale, whose father had recently made a few millions in furs.

Peter had always known Patty, but there had been a time when Mrs. Gray thought the Gales a cut beneath her.

Certainly, when home, Peter fairly lived at the Gales', and when his junior prom loomed in the offing, he promptly invited the whole Gale family to it.

Mrs. Gray, who had gamely stood the cost of box, taxis, flowers, and what not, was frankly disappointed when nothing evidently came of it. She tried Peter out after the dance itself when a full moon, lantern lighted campus, and the seductive waltzes of a metropolitan orchestra might reasonably be supposed to have got in their romantic work.

"Patty is a fine girl, Peter."

"Sure is," said Peter carelessly.

"Deserves a good husband."

"Righto, ma mere. Got any cigarettes? Oh, I forgot you don't smoke!"

"Peter—don't be horrid!" Mrs. Gray had learned nothing for her pains.

She did not go on for her son's commencement. It was a great blow when she knew that Peter would not receive a diploma. He had made a fraternity—one of the best—and had invited his mother to pour at the commencement week tea. But, although the Gales were going en masse, Peter's mother stayed home.

She was totally unprepared for his bursting in upon her a day ahead of his expected arrival.

"Had to dash right home to tell you, mother!" he cried, grabbing her in his arms and dancing her around in spite of herself. "I'm engaged! I'm engaged!"

"Oh, Peter!" said Mrs. Gray feebly. Then, spurred by one last hope, "Is it Patty?"

"Patty? My eye, no! She's been married three months to my roommate, but they kept it secret so he could graduate. No, siree. To the finest little girl in the world. None other than Patty's little sister Cathleen!"

To this day, Mrs. Gray doesn't know whether the credit of Peter's marriage should be laid at her door or not. Surely, if Peter had not been thrown so much with Patty he would not have come in contact with Patty's pretty, clever little sub-deb sister. And surely Mrs. Gray would never have thrown him with Patty had she not made up her mind at Peter's prep school commencement that the only career her son was fitted for was that of husband to a rich wife.

PURSE SNATCHER ROBS BOOKKEEPER

Man Trails Miss Marie Stein, Grabs Purse Containing $25 and Escapes

TWO MEN GIVE CHASE

Thief Escapes in Alley Taking Money and Throwing Away Purse and Other Contents

Police continued to check clues today that may lead to the arrest of the men who snatched a purse from Miss Stein's hand as she walked home on Kindred street Saturday evening at 9:30 o'clock and escaped with $25 in cash.

The purse and contents with the exception of the money was recovered in an alley between Fifth and Sixth avenues and E and F streets Sunday.

The man had taken the money from the purse as he fled, leaving the other contents of the purse and the purse itself scattered about the alley.

The theft occurred on Kindred street between Gillis and First avenues. Miss Marie Stein, companion to Miss Stein had bid goodnight on the corner of Gillis avenue and Kindred street. A man who had strolled behind the two from downtown then walked faster when Miss Stein was alone. He came up behind her, pulled the purse from out of her hand and fled. Miss Stein screamed, attracting Adolph Denis and Jacob Hass who ran after the thief. Miss Stein also gave chase for half a block and then gave up. The purse snatcher made good his escape. In jerking the purse from Miss Stein's hand he tore it from the strap.

Miss Stein is employed as bookkeeper at Scott store.

CHAMPION CLUB PLANS 1931 WORK

Allen 4H Group Takes Many Honors in Past Year; Set Ambitious Goal

The Allen 4H club, under the able leadership of Mrs. Fred F. Johnson, and consisting of 17 members, finished the year's work as the Champion 4H club of Crow Wing county. This club, which has just been awarded the silver cup donated by the Deere Commercial club, is making ardent plans for 1931.

A summary of its activities for the year 1930 is as follows: The club organized on February 12, 1930 by County Agent E. G. Roth. The following officers for the year were elected: President—Dorothy Draeger. Vice President—Edna Mongan. Secretary-Treasurer—Nadene Johnson.

Local Leader—Mrs. Fred F. Johnson.

During the season eight meetings were held. One organization meeting, four meetings with programs, one picnic, one tour and one Home Achievement Day. The average attendance for the club was 93 per cent for the year. The projects taken up were as follows: garment making, bread making, canning, home garden, poultry, potatoes.

The club also had several demonstration teams which were as follows: bread making, Nadene Johnson and Margaret Mongan; garment making, Virginia and Elizabeth Hunt; canning, Dorothy Draeger and Anna Buchte.

The bread making and garment making teams won first prize at the county fair.

One of the goals of the club was that every member should exhibit at the county fair. This was carried out. Thirty-three prizes totaling $80.75 were won by the members. The club also put on a 4H club booth at the county fair winning second prize.

Harold Johnson, one of the members, won a trip to the Junior Livestock show at South St. Paul in November with his pure bred white Wyandotte chickens.

Among the outside speakers at the meetings of the Allen club were: Miss Schenck, state club agent; Representative A. M. Opsahl; Brainerd city attorney, D. H. Fullerton; George E. Erickson, editor of the Brainerd Tribune and Phillip Swenson, Minnesota university field worker. The club was also given valuable aid by County Agent E. G. Roth and County Club Agent Fred N. Johnson. More than 300 visitors attended the various meetings.

The club financed the purchase of fertilizer for garden and potato club members and funds were raised for this purpose by socials etc.

Various activities were enjoyed by the club during the year. Mrs. Johnson gave a party at her home in April.

A marshmallow roast was enjoyed by all in September. Most of the members took in the club camp at the county fair.

Some of the things learned during the year by making a study of the records are as follows: It was found that commercial fertilizer on the garden and potato plots caused these crops to mature earlier but the dry weather caused the potatoes to be smaller and very scabby. In bread making it was found that the things like keeping the bowl and board free from dough and flour counted on the score card. In garment making it was advised to have exhibits in harmonizing colors.

The club as a whole have found that there is a great deal of fun to be had in working together for a common goal. The club has worked for the motto "Make Your Better Best" and plans to have another strong unit again in 1931.

SAYS HE WAS HURT, NOT INTOXICATED

Bill Harmon Pleads Not Guilty But Held on Former Sentence Stayed

Bill Harmon faced Judge J. H. Warner in municipal court this morning to declare that he was knocked unconscious by a fall on the ice of a slippery street rather than guilty of intoxication when picked up and jailed by officers Sunday morning at 4 o'clock.

Harmon was taken into custody by officers when they came upon him lying on Ninth street near Maple street.

"I was not drunk, I slipped and fell down and laid there for some time, how long I did not know," Harmon said.

His hearing was set for Tuesday afternoon.

In investigating Harmon's record, Judge Warner learned that he had a ten day sentence still pending from a plea of intoxication on June 10. At that time Harmon had been granted a stay of 30 days to do work on his farm east of Brainerd.

Judge Warner ordered the man back to jail to serve out the old ten day sentence.

UNUSUAL GOODNESS OF FAMOUS COFFEE INTRIGUES EXPERTS

Find That Delicious Flavor is the Result of Patented Roasting Process

Probably no coffee sold today has enjoyed the success of Hills Bros. Coffee. Everywhere it has been introduced it has become a leader.

This popularity lies in the fact that Hills Bros. Coffee has a delicious, uniform flavor such as no other coffee has. While the rare blend is partly responsible for this, the patented process, by which it is roasted, is one factor that has made this matchless, uniform flavor possible in every pound.

Instead of roasting in bulk, Hills Bros. roast only a few pounds at a time. By this process—the degree of roast, the continuous flow of coffee through the roasters, never vary. Hence the name of this process—Controlled Roasting.

Grocers everywhere sell Hills Bros. Coffee. It is always fresh because it is packed in vacuum cans from which air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is taken out and kept out. Ordinary cans, even if air-tight, do not keep coffee fresh. Ask for Hills Bros. Coffee by name and look for the Arab—the trade-mark—on the can.

GIRL UNAFRAID

BY
JOHNSON

Birth of Ken's Son Adds to Ardeh's Unhappiness.

CHAPTER XXXI.
BELOW the reformed Smokerie was the store room—a dismal cemented basement lit by a dangling electric light. A short flight of steps led to the upper world, and when the door was open dark and musty smells breathed from it.

At night when Ardeh lay on the couch she could hear the mice scampering over the packing cases down there, could even hear their infinitesimal squeaks through the thick stillness.

It worried Tom to think of her down there in the deserted business area. Worried Mary Eastwood too. Mary came down and used up much eloquent reasoning trying to make Ardeh change her mind.

"You could be murdered and none of us would know a thing about it until Ah Ling came to open up the shop in the morning!" she said severely.

No Fear.

"Time enough then, Mary darling!" the girl replied lightly. "If I'm thoroughly murdered I really won't care when you learn of it!"
Afraid. . . No, she wasn't afraid. There was no fear left in her. Hope and fear had been put away with those pink silk things which had been the beginnings of her modest trousseau. Put away with her love and her girlish dreams of happiness.

One did not lie awake at night fearing burglars and killers. One thought only of things to buy and sell. Sometimes, of things that might have been. Of Ken. And of the coming baby.

The shop was a quiet little world, shutting her in here with forgetfulness.

From the first it prospered under her management. If she lost a few regular attendants who had haunted the Smokerie—Cyril Underhill among them—they were of the type who had rarely patronized the outer shop as well. Their number was more than made up by new patrons who had stayed away because of the Smokerie. Among these, was Carolyn Forsythe, Tom's sister.

Mrs. Forsythe had not arrived without an inner struggle. She had listened with discretion to Tom's rhapsodies, and with a great deal of mental reservation. In her secret heart she was convinced that her beloved brother was being taken in by some designing shop girl.

But on her first visit to The Caprice, she capitulated. From being skeptical she swung over to Tom's side and became his most ardent supporter. She was a little woman and amazingly like her brother, with Tom's kindly brown eyes; plump, where he was stocky; but kind and well-intentioned on the whole.

She insisted that Ardeh come down to visit at the Forsythes' cabin in the Santa Cruz Mountains over the week end. She sent Tom into the shop at the end of the day with strict orders to bring Ardeh home for dinner. She vied with Mary Eastwood in loyal patronage of the little store.

Ardeh found it pleasant to leave the shop Saturday evenings and accompany Tom down to the Summer cabin of the Forsythes. The city dropping behind, the ocean on their right, rolling in under the red light of a late sunset. Plunging into the blue twilight of the mountains, redwoods and evergreens standing like stiff sentinels either side of the highway, velvet black silhouettes against a star crowded sky. The little rustic cabin in the redwood grove. The door flung open at the sound of their arrival and the two lively Forsythe youngsters flinging themselves upon Ardeh before she could step out of the car.

Pleasant dinners at a table drawn before the fireplace. Tom's adoring eyes devouring Ardeh's face in the rosy light.

Waking to the early twittering of birds, the smell of evergreens, seeing the first golden bars of the sun trembling through the window.

Forgetfulness.

It carried her out of herself. Swimming. Dancing. Playing wild games with Tom and Len Forsythe and the shrieking children she became a girl again, as laughing and breathless as when she had played hide-and-seek with Neil in that childhood which seemed almost mythical now.

The long ride home up the dark highway Sunday night pleasantly tired.

But somehow comforting to come back to the quiet room behind the dark little shop and settle into the place which was really her own. Peace. . . a sort of tired peace here. Life could not reach her here. Life had hurt her and passed on. If she was very quiet it might forget her. . . might never hurt her again.

But Ardeh found she could still be hurt. . . on the day she learned of the birth of Cecile's son.

Phyllis Hawkins it was who told her as she sat before a mirror idly trying the effect of amber earrings versus jade against her milky skin.

"I was in the same hospital having my tonsils out!" she spoke in her clear, babyish voice with its odd suggestion of crystal hardness. "My nurse gave me all the dirt. Disposition! My dear, Cecile Gleason could give pointers to a lady scorpion! How Ken stands it is more than I can imagine, poor lamb! You'd think Cecile was the only one ever had a child! The nurse said she pretty nearly killed the poor little brat from the first—dancing and raising whoopee till all hours, so that boy never had a fair start. You knew it was a boy, didn't you?"

Ardeh turned quickly away on the pretext of finding more earrings. A son. . . Ken had a son.

That night she broke an engagement to go to Mary Eastwood's and she lay in the back room listening to the rain drumming on the window. Her heart was a wild, rebellious thing beating against the bars. Cecile. . . the mother of Ken's son. Suppose the dead hands of an old woman had not wilfully tangled the skeins of their lives. Ah. . . don't think of that! Madness lay that way. . .

Life Goes On.

And life went on, a thing of days and weeks, of smiles and soft words. . . Busy days. Nights when she read until the first light strained into the single window of the back room. Technical works, travel, obscure volumes on art, borrowed from the nearest library.

The little shop flourished, enabled to hold its own among richer places by the personal touch. Ardeh had a way of adding value to the article she sold by endowing it with her own interest. Legends and ancient superstitions of the semi-precious stones, histories of the delicate French fans, the glamour of the Orient connected with the teaks and the jades. She was paying off the loan to Tom, each month the shop was more surely her own.

The busy holidays. The rains of winter already forgotten in Spring flowers. Daffodils and crocuses blooming again on the flowerstand at the corner.

In the sunshine of a quiet Sunday, Ardeh was dressing the one narrow window of the shop. Yesterday had been too busy for this necessary work and the window could not go over to next week.

A spring window. . . ran the girl's thoughts as she worked. Little in it, for it must be airy. Perhaps that new teakwood tabourette she had picked up yesterday, in-laid with mother-of-pearl. Then the black bowl of mirror-black, and a white marble nymph leaning luxuriantly back against a thicket of daffodils and maiden-hair.

Her fingers went lovingly over the bowl and nymph as she placed it in the window. A gem she had picked up in an Italian importing place last week.

She went out in front to survey the result from the street. Nearly collided with someone watching from the pavement and murmured a quick apology.

Found the words frozen on her lips when she realized that she was facing Ken.

Are You "Hitting On All Six?"

Liver—Stomach—Bowels—Nerves—Brain—Heart—Are They All 100%?

Folks, the human body is just like a good car, everything must be in good working order if you expect to get the best performance out of either.

You can't expect to feel 100% if your liver is out of order, your stomach upset, nerves jumpy or bowels tied up. GIRL UNAFRAID

BY GLADYS JOHNSON

Birth of Ken's Son Adds to Ardeth's Unhappiness.

CHAPTER XXXI.

BELOW the reformed Smokerie was the store room—a dismal cemented basement lit by a dangle electric light. A short flight of steps led to the upper world, and when the door was open dark and musty smells breathed from it.

At night when Ardeth lay on the couch she could hear the muffled scuffling over the packing cases down there, could even hear their infinitesimal squeaks through the thick stillness.

It worried Tom to think of her down there in the deserted business area. Worried Mary Eastwood too. Mary came down and used up much eloquent reasoning trying to make Ardeth change her mind.

"You could be murdered and none of us would know a thing about it until Ah Ling came to open up the shop in the morning," she said severely.

No Fear.

"Time enough then, Mary darling," the girl replied lightly. "If I'm thoroughly murdered I really won't care when you learn of it!"

Afraid. . . No, she wasn't afraid. There was no fear left in her. Hope and fear had been put away with those pink silk things which had been the beginnings of her modest trousseau. Put away with her love and her girlish dreams of happiness.

One did not lie awake at night fearing burglars and killers. One thought only of things to buy and sell. Sometimes, of things that might have been. Of Ken. And of the coming baby.

The shop was a quiet little world, shutting her in here with forgetfulness.

From the first it prospered under her management. If she lost a few regular attendants who had haunted the Smokerie—Cyril Underhill among them—they were of the type who had rarely patronized the outer shop as well. Their number was more than made up by new patrons who had stayed away because of the Smokerie. Among these, was Carolyn Forsythe, Tom's sister.

Mrs. Forsythe had not arrived without an inner struggle. She had listened with discretion to Tom's rhapsodies, and with a great deal of mental reservation. In her secret heart she was convinced that her beloved brother was being taken in by some designing shop girl.

But on her first visit to The Caprice, she capitulated. From being skeptical she swung over to Tom's side and became his most ardent supporter. She was a little woman and amazingly like her brother, with Tom's kindly brown eyes; plump, where he was stocky. A little flutery in manner perhaps, but kind and well-intentioned on the whole.

She insisted that Ardeth come down to visit at the Forsythes' cabin in the Santa Cruz Mountains over the week end. She sent Tom into the shop at the end of the day with strict orders to bring Ardeth home for dinner. She vied with Mary Eastwood in loyal patronage of the little store.

Ardeth found it pleasant to leave the shop Saturday evenings and accompany Tom down to the Summer cabin of the Forsythes. The city dropping behind, the ocean on their right, rolling in under the red light of a late sunset. Plunging into the blue twilight of the mountains, redwoods and evergreens standing like stiff sentinels either side of the highway, velvet black silhouettes against a star crowded sky. The little rustic cabin in the redwood grove. The door flung open at the sound of their arrival and the two lively Forsythe youngsters flinging themselves upon Ardeth before she could step out of the car.

Pleasant dinners at a table drawn before the fireplace. Tom's adoring eyes devouring Ardeth's face in the rosy light.

Waking to the early twittering of birds, the smell of evergreens, seeing the first golden bars of the sun trembling through the window.

Forgetfulness.

It carried her out of herself. Swimming. Dancing. Playing wild games with Tom and Len Forsythe and the shrieking children she became a girl again, as laughing and breathless as when she had played hide-and-seek with Neil in that childhood which seemed almost mythical now.

The long ride home up the dark highway Sunday night pleasantly tired.

But somehow comforting to come back to the quiet room behind the dark little shop and settle into the place which was really her own. Peace. . . a sort of tired peace here. Life could not reach her here. Life had hurt her and passed on. If she was very quiet it might forget her. . . might never hurt her again.

But Ardeth found she could still be hurt. . . on the day she learned of the birth of Cecile's son.

Phyllis Hawkins it was who told her as she sat before a mirror idly trying the effect of amber earrings versus jade against her milky skin.

"I was in the same hospital having my tonsils out," she spoke in her clear, babyish voice with its odd suggestion of crystal hardness. "My nurse gave me all the dirt. Disposition! My dear, Cecile Gleason could give pointers to a lady scorpion! How Ken stands it is more than I can imagine, poor lamb! You'd think Cecile was the only one ever had a child! The nurse said she pretty nearly killed the poor little brat from the first—dancing and raising whoopee till all hours, so that boy never had a fair start. You knew it was a boy, didn't you?"

Ardeth turned quickly away on the pretext of finding more card-boards.

A son. . . Ken had a son.

That night she broke an engagement to go to Mary Eastwood's and she lay in the back room listening to the rain drumming on the window. Her heart was a wild, rebellious thing beating against the bars. Cecile. . . the mother of Ken's son. Suppose the dead hands of an old woman had not willfully tangled the skeins of their lives. Ah. . . don't think of that! Madness lay that way. . .

Life Goes On.

And life went on, a thing of days and weeks, of smiles and soft words. . . Busy days. Nights when she read until the first light strained into the single window of the back room. Technical works, travel, obscure volumes on art, borrowed from the nearest library.

The little shop flourished, enabled to hold its own among richer places by the personal touch. Ardeth had a way of adding value to the article she sold by endowing it with her own interest. Legends and ancient superstitions of the semi-precious stones, histories of the delicate French fans, the glamour of the Orient connected with the teaks and the jades. She was paying off the loan to Tom, each month the shop was more surely her own.

The busy holidays. The rains of winter already forgotten in spring flowers. Daffodils and cornflowers blooming again on the flowerstand at the corner.

In the sunshine of a quiet Sunday, Ardeth was dressing the one narrow window of the shop. Yes, today had been too busy for this necessary work and the window could not go over to next week.

A Spring window. . . ran the girl's thoughts as she worked. Little in it, for it must be airy. Perhaps that new teakwood tabourette she had picked up yesterday, in-laid with mother-of-pearl. Then the black bowl of mirror-black, and a white marble nymph leaning luxuriously back against a thicket of daffodils and maiden-hair.

Her fingers went lovingly over the bowl and nymph as she placed it in the window. A gem she had picked up in an Italian importing place last week.

She went out in front to survey the result from the street. Nearly collided with someone watching from the pavement and murmured a quick apology.

Found the words frozen on her lips when she realized that she was facing Ken.
